FROM THE DESK OF THE EDITORS

These past four years have seen tremendous change in each of our fellow students and in our class as a whole. From 2007 to 2011 we have expanded our identities, made many wonderful friends, and learned and tried many things entirely new to us. We have grown as individuals, each one of us, and we will never be the same as we were once. This book is intended to capture four years of your life at Winchester High School, to embalm them forever in the hopes that years from now, when you look back at these pages, you will be reminded of those teachers, classes, events, and most of all, those friends that characterized your time at WHS.

This is your high school yearbook. We had a lot of fun creating it, writing articles, taking photographs, and designing layouts. As enjoyable as it was, however, it was a lot of work. While we are no longer in the more hands-on physical realm of yearbook production, while we are now living in an increasingly virtual, digitized world where yearbooks are designed on computer screens, it was still a long, careful process piecing together what you now hold in your hands. We have spent hours editing and reworking, amassing images from various sources, gathering articles and information, and assembling what we hope you find to be aesthetically pleasing pages.

We aimed to capture in these pages at least a fraction of what constituted your academic and social experience here. Whether your high school years were a real lapazoo, or a seemingly endless stream of malarkey and jaded disillusionment, or somewhere in between, they are over now, and you are free to look back on them however you like. While you may not want to relive this period of your life, rather than discarding these memories, or dwelling too long upon them, this book will be here to highlight for you some of the better aspects of these four years. As you begin to gain perspective and distance from these years, distance from these people and these memories, this book will hopefully serve to call to mind those people and those moments that once centered so focally in our thoughts.

Curious to see where you will be in the next few years, and excited to see who you will become,

Your Yearbook Editors-in-Chief,
Mimi Wilson and Amanda Fee

Winchester Idol

Winchester High's first ever Winchester Idol proved to be a brilliant idea, combining a talent show atmosphere with the excitement of competition. Six unassuming students took the stage in front of judges Gerry Skinder and Kathleen Pickett, and a very eager audience.

Senior Laura Breitenbach kicked off the night with her rendition of the Disney classic, "Colors of the Wind."

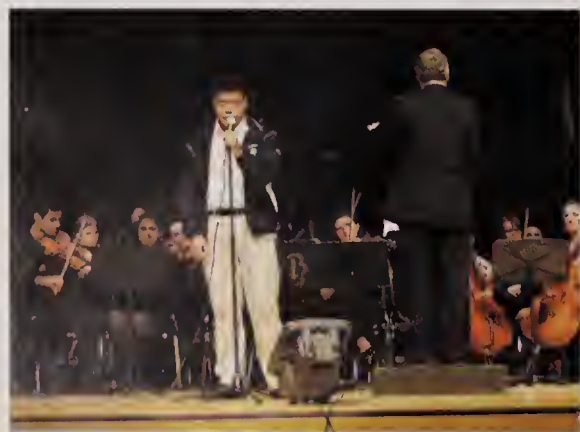

After Laura was junior Nick Cashion, who sang a heart-felt cover of Ben E. King's "Stand by Me."

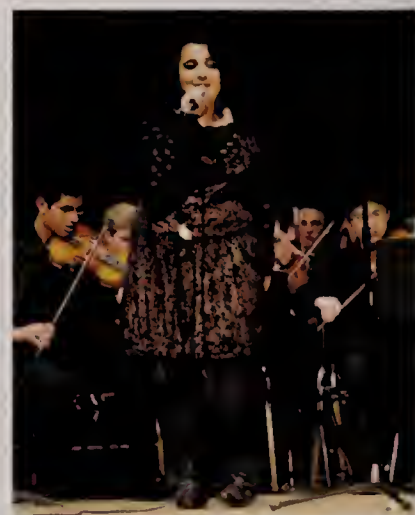

Lucy Page, a soprano in the Chamber Singers, followed Nick with a flawless performance of John Lennon's "Imagine." Following Lucy, Kate Clark, a talented underclassman, managed to wow the audience with a powerfully rendered version of Sting's classic "Every Breath You Take."

Clapton's "Tears in Heaven," sung by senior Tony Chan, was well performed and full of emotion.

But it was junior Karole Alexander who brought the audience to their feet with her amazing performance of Leonard Cohen's "Hallelujah."

LGBTIQ AWARENESS

Purple for Spirit, Purple for Support

In light of the seven recent LGBTIQ suicides that rocked the country in early 2010, October 20th was designated as a LGBTIQ Spirit and Awareness Day: all participants would wear purple, the color of spirit, in memory of the seven. The news spread like wildfire, and all WHS students were encouraged to participate.

WUSYOUTH GROUP

Article by Carly Cronon

Youth groups bring together a bunch of kids who may not be friends at school and challenges them to reconsider their assumptions about others in the group. They bridge gaps between social circles and grade levels, bring important discussion topics to the table, and provide each member with a group of kids that is there for them and will say, "that kid's in my youth group and he's actually really awesome."

The Winchester Unitarian Society Youth Group is one of the many youth groups that kids from the high school participate in. We meet on Sunday evenings in the colorfully decorated basement of the Unitarian church to check in about our weeks, make soup for members of the congregation who are ill or injured, discuss fundraisers and future service trips, and play games that help us to get things off our chests and to get to know each other.

Like many other youth groups, WUSYG tries to organize at least one service project each year. Within the last 4 years, we've been to the bayous of Louisiana and the mountains of North Carolina to help families repair, paint, and put flooring in their homes. We've also co-run a day camp in Roxbury with a local youth group for elementary schoolers in the area. It is a valuable experience to cook our own meals, shower at public community centers, and sleep in a giant room together on army cots and sleeping bags. Yet it is the work we do and the people we meet that we will never forget and that will always bring us to tears. We learn that it doesn't matter that we're teenagers inexperienced in the way of power tools--we can still be of help. We have energy and the patience to make fools of ourselves as we search for the right drill bit. When we come home after successfully cutting out a hole in the wooden floor for the AC vent, meeting a first grader who has seen his brother shot in his backyard, and talking to a former Crystal Meth addict who totally turned his life around, we return with even greater energy and a desire to change the way we live and interact with one another.

HALLOWEEN

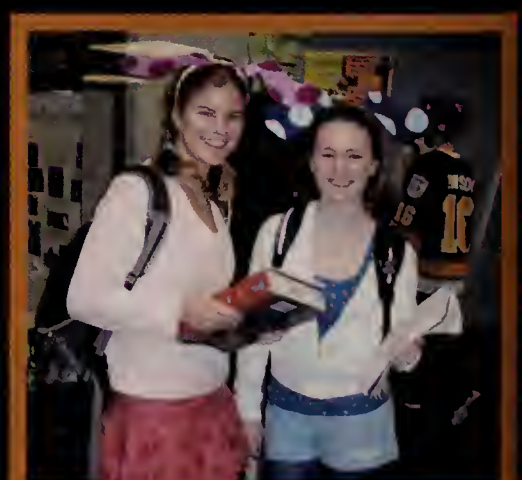

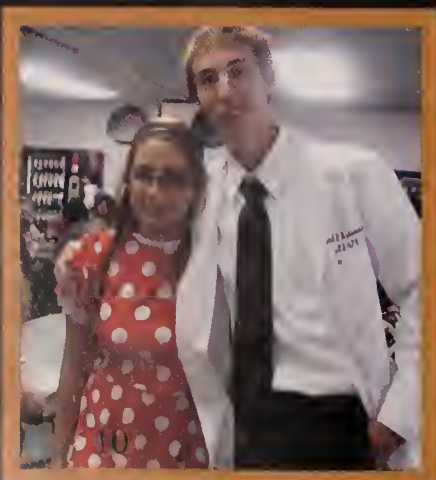

by Jenny Eleftherakis and Leia Herlihy

Walking through the front doors of WHS, you are immediately overcome with the sense that something feels off. You look to your right and see a small tribe of Native Americans, asking Allen from The Hangover what his plans for the night are. On your left, a few stray bumblebees struggle to keep up with their swarm. Audrey Hepburn strides by, with Hermoine Granger following close behind. Mario and Luigi are complimenting each others' overalls near the office, and two brightly colored Skittles hurry by on their way to the cafeteria wait, Skittles can run? Looking down at your own getup, you discover that you have been transported back the 80's, Risky Business style. You knew something seemed weird today. And that's when it hits you.

It's Halloween.

Suddenly, it all makes sense: the cowgirls posing with straw in their mouths; the old men silently limping to class; the occasional hipster in black-framed glasses and tight jeans, ironically conforming by dressing as something that isn't too obscure for WHS-goers to understand, sauntering down the hallway. These are identities that will only appear for one day, so while that vampire near the history wing may like to show her teeth, and the cat in the art room enjoys bearing her claws, this is the only day of the year when the gypsies, roadkill, and zombie slayers can show their true colors. Embrace this chance to express your true self, but don't forget that when the masks come off, all will be calm again.

Rock FOR YOUTH

ARTICLE BY VIVIAN DIACO PICTURES BY NICK COBB

On November 19th, 2010 high school students gathered in the town hall auditorium to listen to great live music played by high school bands during the annual Rock 4 Youth.

The cult of celebrity has no doubt crossed the mind of the average commoner more than once. However, it is often true that the adolescent crowd is more easily seduced by Hollywood. The same way, teenagers love to be involved in the relative fame of their peers... And what better way to earn such popularity, than to be in a band? Among their graduating classes and entire high schools, the musically gifted are envied, and occasionally worshipped. People are clearly intrigued by what it must be like to perform onstage in front of a crowd. I had the opportunity to interview two bands performing at the Battle of the Bands this year, in order to produce just that; a peek "behind the curtains," into the real people behind the sound.

The first band I spoke with, and arguably one of the most popular among the students of Winchester High, was Neglected Lawnmower. People who have met the infamous members of Neglected Lawnmower know that they are a fun bunch. Accordingly, they were lighthearted in their commentary, and appeared confident in themselves before their performance. "My favorite is Eddie Schneider... No, everyone's favorite is Eddie Schneider," Karole Alexander, the band's singer, informed me. When asked why the bassist was so great, she responded, "Ever seen Eddie Schneider in short-shorts?" Not much more needed to be said, and there was little objection from the rest of the band. They had a lot to say about members of other bands as well; when asked just who they would vote for at the event, other than themselves, there was a general consensus that, "the freshman band" (Herman Jansin), and Abyss were most worthy of their support. The entire band was excited about the event, and very socially involved in it. Karole explained her feeling that there is a personal, friendly "rivalry" of sorts between herself and Alec Prodromou, lead singer of Unwanted Party Guests.

Viktor Hermann, the guitarist of Neglected Lawnmower, is a member of both bands; naturally, because of this there was no real tension between bands reflected in what Neglected Lawnmower had to say about the entire event. "Battle of the Bands is not so much of a [competition] as it is just a bunch of bands playing at the same event," Viktor explained. The entire band agreed that Blind should have been allowed to perform at the event this year; they were not allowed into this year's Battle of the Bands because of an issue that arose last year. Viktor also had comments about the crowd that the band would be performing for; "If people want to show up [messed up], they will. The ones who aren't disruptive won't get kicked out." The band seemed, for the most part, sure about themselves, in terms of how they would perform at the Battle of the Bands. Karole, however, expressed some concern over one of the songs she was to sing; "It's a surprise," she said, and when I asked if she was worried about it, I was surprised to hear her response, "very much so." Viktor voiced similar concern, but not about himself. He said, "I feel like Eric's gonna mess up." Eric McEntee, the band's drummer, was not available for comment. The bassist, Eddie Schneider, had this prophecy to reveal about the band's performance: "I was in my bathroom the other day, and a countryman told me, 'they're gonna do really good.'"

I also had the privilege of sitting in on a pre-Battle rehearsal of Fun Machine!, who, in particular, impressed me. The band members arrived and left at different times during the practice, but they were all pleasant and made strong individual musical contributions; as each performer arrived, the "big picture" of the sound that Fun Machine! aimed to create was realized. Admittedly, I had my preconceived notions of teenage band practices. I occasionally found myself closing my mind off to anything new that could come from this band; I started having my own expectations, of an hour of noisy commotion among teenagers in a crowded space. These notions were slightly reinforced by the experience of walking down dusty cement stairs into a basement to see the band. Yet, almost immediately, I was tipped off that this band was not quite like the others. A Michael Jackson poster was hanging near the door. Now, you would be hard pressed to find someone who doesn't like Michael Jackson, yet for some reason, seeing that poster made me feel as if I was headed for something other than heavy-metal or grunge. (On this note, another detail worth mentioning is that the band members were all smiling, and not one of them had multicolored neon side bangs.)

The keyboardist, James Fullerton, caught my attention when he played Misty by Johnny Mathis. This, to me, was more reinforcement of the idea that Fun Machine! was not a group of angst-filled teenagers trying to make loud noise of some sort (that's a good impression in my book). So, I knew what they weren't... but just what did they sound like? To sum up Fun Machine!'s sound in one word is simply not, for lack of a better term, fair. The group could be referred to as "unique," at least among the other bands in participation in the Battle of the Bands. They consider themselves to be, in Fullerton's words, "arrangers"; they adapt songs of different styles to their instruments, which include two saxophones, a keyboard, a bass, a drum set, a trumpet, and the vocal talents of Becca Greaves. When the band broke out into the Mario Bros. theme song, their "arranging" talents were well displayed. A combination of two of the most popular tunes from the classic game were transposed onto a refreshingly different set of sounds, (dare I say it,) flawlessly. They admit that they like to add their own personal touches to the pieces they arrange, but it's obvious that they don't do any "butchering" of the music when they arrange their pieces.

I took time during transitions and setup to get some commentary and hear what the band members thought of their performance at Battle of the Bands, which was to happen in just a few hours. James gave me his opinion on the overall confidence of the band in their performance, and on its importance, he said, "We're not overconfident... Well, maybe I am. Without confidence you're not going to sound good no matter what; you gotta just belt it out". He also apologized immediately, that Stan Fonseca, the band's trumpet player, wasn't there at the moment "to say anything witty". Nonetheless, I was amused by their comments, which included debate over which hats to wear, how much Lucas Phillips' (the bassist) glasses resembled goggles... Not to mention projections of the narratives of their own portrayals in the Red and Black ("as James sat and made noise in the corner..."). Just how true is this claim of "overconfidence"? When asked to describe themselves, Stan replied, saying, "very sexy" would be a suitable description. "Delicious... I might go as far as delectable," added percussionist Christian Boulanger, and finally Stan concluded that the band is "scrumptious." I wholeheartedly agree.

The band members also echoed the sentiment of Neglected Lawnmower on the subject of "band rivalry". James explained that while Fun Machine!'s members all participated in Jazz Band at the High School, "a lot of us are in more than one band... so we [as bands] are kind of connected." Ad Astra even dropped in after the practice to pick up some equipment the two groups were going to share during the event. Gradually the band settled into their performing groove, and their sound became increasingly fluid - Not what you would (or really rather what I would) expect from a teenage band. They played "Lock You Up," originally by The Love Dogs, and did a fabulous job; they have a lively sound, not the kind of brass section that would provide ambience or elevator music. That song, along with the blues number they had arranged, was the music that impressed me the most, because it's so different from what teenagers are playing now. They plan to expand "someday, soon," to playing things that are "not very recognizable". I was given a sneak peek into the future of Fun Machine!, who hope to bring BB King or Bruce Springsteen to the teen crowd. At their last practice before Battle of the Bands, Fun Machine! already had a polished performance quality, that is to say, the rehearsal I listened to reflected effort and time. It turns out, the band has been together for about two months-- not very long. Still, they have had about ten rehearsals, beginning in the past summer with James and Stan. They get together in "bits and pieces," with different members meeting each other at different times, when convenient, to practice. For such casual and impromptu rehearsal plans, the band nonetheless puts on a good performance. Like all good things, Fun Machine!'s music is worth taking the time to appreciate and enjoy. After all, "scrumptious" is a tempting, and truly fitting, description of their sound. They perform perfectly respectable renditions of music that isn't clogging up the mainstream radio stations, bringing it to teenagers that might not have otherwise heard it, with the smooth sound that adults appreciate from the original music. At the Battle of the Bands, both Neglected Lawnmower and Fun Machine! put on crowd-pleasing performances.

Karole's voice (frequently described as "big") engaged the crowd in a powerful performance of Toxicity by System of a Down. Their surprise song, Let's Get it On, was a hit among the audience, and Karole really belted it. Viktor Hermann (of whose talent I am a personal fan) let loose on his guitar solo, and Eddie Schneider's performance revealed the reason he is so worshipped by his fan base (I guess the prophetic countryman was right). One fact worth mentioning is that there was no perceivable "mess-up" on Eric's part. Naturally, I was eager to see how the crowd would react to Fun Machine!, as they provided a great contrast to the other music that had been played. They did not disappoint. Their arrangement of classic Mario Bros. music was well-received, and the audience was engaged (it turns out, according to Stan, that the band, "actually manufactures 'fun'"). A few people commented admiringly on the combined sound of the two saxophonists, Alex Konecky playing alto sax and Beth Sampson playing tenor sax. I especially appreciated Beth's solo, a very unique occurrence in the midst of the whole event.

Talking one on one with members of the bands who performed on stage for this year's Battle of the Bands was enlightening. These kids are not quite as aloof as we may be tempted to believe they are. They get nervous like any performers, and they have other qualities than the talent that gave them their notoriety (for instance, a sense of humor). The kids who bring simultaneous entertainment and envy to the rest of the high school population are separated from their peers by their talent and their popularity, among a few other factors... but upon further inspection, they are indeed teenagers like the rest of us.

★ SPIRIT WEEK AT WMS ★

Written by Kate
O'Connell

People could tell Winchester High School is full of spirit just by walking down the hall during Thanksgiving week. Students went all out for Spirit half week this year, participating in "Neon" Day, "Superhero" Day, and "Show your Colors" Day. On Monday, many students, in every grade, got all decked out in the brightest colors to show off their school pride. With people wearing everything from bright orange t-shirts to hot pink leggings, the hallways were as bright as a rainbow.

On Tuesday, multiple students and teachers went wild, dressing up as their favorite superheroes. With capes, masks, face paint, and spandex, Winchester High School had turned into a comic book over night. This was the first time the school chose to have a Superhero day and it was definitely a hit. Hallways were a safe place on November 23rd with mass amounts of "Supermen," "Batmen," "Flash," and "Iron Men" protecting the school from crime. The last day of Spirit Week, "show your colors day," is always the most popular day of the week. On this day each grade is assigned a color: seniors wear black, juniors wear red, sophomores wear green, and freshman wear white. Each grade took part in "Color day", but in the end the senior class won by wearing the most black. Students of the senior class came motivated to win; filling the hallways with black shorts, t-shirts, pants, and face paint. The class will be presented with the grand prize of two hundred dollars by the student council.

After a short day of twenty-five minute classes, students flowed into the gymnasium to watch the annual pep rally. The Octets kicked off the rally by giving a phenomenal performance beginning with the National Anthem. All fall sports captains were then called up to the podium at the head of the gym to remind the school community how well each sports team had done this year. After all the talk, the cheerleading and Stampede dance team performed, giving the audience something to cheer for. With the cheerleaders doing flips like never before and Stampede being smooth with so much rhythm they both were a big hit.

Not only was the Pep Rally a big success, but the Senior vs. Junior Powder Puff Game was as well. Despite frigid temperatures both girls' teams played a raging game against each other on Manchester Field right after Wednesday's pep rally. With the help of their coaches, Alex Kohn, Brandon Nowell, Will Herbert, Richard Mpanga, and Rob Pontrelli the senior girls were able to pull off an impressive win with a score of 18-0. To top off a great Spirit week this year, the football team played an remarkable game Thanksgiving day. Winchester has now beaten Woburn for the second year in a row! This is one week during the entire school year where the whole student body comes together to show how much Sachem pride we really have!

STUDENT JOBS

WRITTEN BY DANA TREMELLO

For many students, having a part-time job can be a great source of extra cash as well as an important learning experience. It is during high school that most students have their first job, and although it can be stressful at times, it is important to gain an understanding of how to interview for a job and how to work with other employees in a workplace environment.

Due to the economic recession there are many unemployed people, and it can be a struggle to find a job. For students, finding a job is especially difficult because part-time hours are necessary and many businesses prefer to have full-time workers. However, some businesses understand that students, despite needing part-time hours, are capable of being dedicated workers and an asset to the business.

Many local businesses are willing to hire younger people and to train them, and enjoy the opportunity to guide a student through their first job experience. Bruegger's Bagels is known to hire high school students from time to time, and many students throughout the years have worked behind their counter, making breakfast sandwiches and bagels with cream cheese for hungry customers.

Senior Maddy Mangan has been working at Bruegger's Bagels since the end of her junior year and enjoys the customer service experience, saying, "I like seeing kids from school come in, or sometimes I even see teachers stopping by. It's nice to work for a local business where there is such a sense of community." Mangan works during the school year as well, an experience which she describes as, "difficult at times because the combination of a job and schoolwork can sometimes be overwhelming."

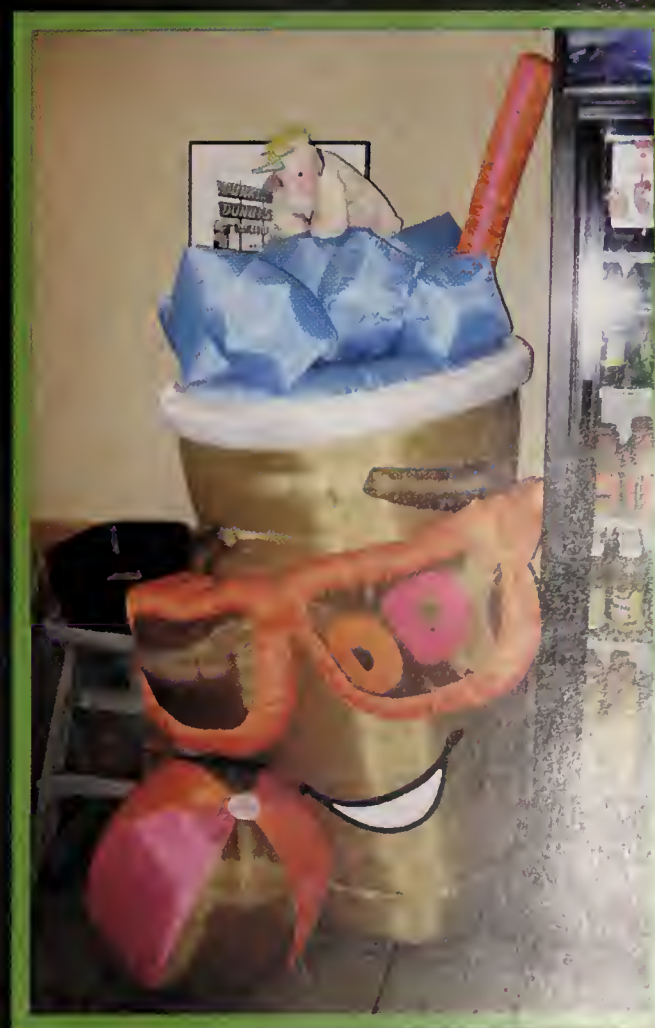

Fellow senior Amanda Fee, an employee of the local Dunkin' Donuts, agrees, saying, "It gets hard sometimes balancing work with school, but the money is worth it." It is because of the steady paychecks that many students hold onto their summer jobs throughout the school year. Although it can sometimes feel like an overload of work, students like Mangan and Fee believe it is manageable because you can always cut down your hours on the weekends or take fewer shifts on days after school.

Another local business that employs high school students from time to time is D'Agostino's Deli. According to Senior Christina Sciucco, working at D'Agostino's is a great job for high school students. She describes her experience working there, saying, "The people who work there are really nice, so it's always fun to go to work, and getting to make myself a free sandwich for lunch is pretty cool too!" For many students, food service jobs are the most widely available and most willing to hire high schoolers. Fortunately, the town of Winchester has many food shops that are only a short walk or drive from the school or student's home.

Winchester's downtown is an area filled with local food shops as well as clothing stores, coffee shops, jewelry stores, a shoe store, and the local supermarket. Many of these establishments have hired WHS students throughout the years, and often the students are able to hold onto these jobs for the summers when they are home from college. Although it may be difficult at times for students to balance work and school, having a job in high school is an experience which many students enjoy having.

Fashion is an art that is ever growing and experimenting, crossing disciplines, referencing a million things at once, delving into past eras and into the farthest, most obscure recesses of popular culture to extract new patterns, presentations, and silhouettes.

Each year brings new materials and new trends to the students at Winchester High School. The silly band fad had died down by the start of September, but the popularity and pervasiveness of moccasins and Uggs would not fade. Boating shoes came to take a place beside them as a huge footwear trend. Clarks, in soft suede neutral-tones, also made an appearance. College sweatshirts and Sachem sweatpants abound, befitting the temperamental climate of WHS in the winter months. Flannels, Patagonia fleeces, layers of Under Armor, woolly sweaters, cashmere scarves and cardigans also help to provide warmth. Ray Bans and skinny jeans remain cool. Maxi skirts and dresses are seen more often this year in the halls, as are a plethora of piercings - including gages and nose studs.

To feed an infatuation with fabrics, textures, shapes, structures, and prints, the students at WHS, who feel so inclined, now read fashion blogs, in addition to fashion magazines and other hard copy fashion publications. This past decade has seen the rise of the blog, and many of these fashion blogs are widely followed and well-regarded, exerting a tremendous influence upon the fashion industry, and upon a number of students at WHS. Such blogs are often written by young people in a home-made manner, like the zines of earlier eras. Fourteen-year-old Tavi Gevinson writes the precocious and enormously insightful Style Rookie. Street fashion photographer Scott Schuman is the creator of the gorgeous, incredibly inspiring The Sartorialist. Fashion journalist Tommy Ton is at Jak & Jil, and 26-year-old stylist Laia is at Geometric Sleep, to name a few fashion destinations popular with the kids nowadays on the interweb.

Fashion at WHS may not be as exciting as it is elsewhere, but it exists. For the majority of students the primary concern is comfort and warmth, but for a few a strong personal aesthetic is highly valued and exhibited through fabric and form. A few of these such students, who deserve to be acknowledged, and lauded, are featured on the following pages...

French Trip to Paris!

WRITTEN BY ANNIE LANGLOIS

Mange-ing crepes!

"Real Winchêstêur" shouted James! And we were off! French Exchange 2011 had begun! Getting off the plane after a 6 hour flight, the kids from Winchester were at Charles de Gaulle Airport, a short bus ride from the final destination of St. Germain-en-Laye, a quaint suburb of Paris. It is here that we met our exchange students. Descending from the bus, we were nervous, but excited. After an awkward "faire le bisou," we headed home to see our new houses.

Bowling!

For the rest of the day, we got acclimated to French food, manners, and the smoke. The next day, we took the RER into Paris where we saw the magnificent Tour Eiffel. After climbing the landmark, we descended for lunch on the Champs d'Elysees. After a trendy meal, we climbed the Arc de Triomphe.

Later, we returned to our new-found home for a stop in the local cafe with our correspondents, where we struggled to order our 4 Euro "cafe" (1 espresso shot). One French girl asked "Is this what it is like at the cafe with your friends in Winchester?" We caught each other's eyes and unanimously said "...what cafe?" The French kids taught us the correct way to sip coffee and take 2 hours to finish it.

After this lesson in how to be French, we returned home for gourmet meals with our French families. Baguettes, fromage, crepes and weird grilled meats with melted cheese galore. Then, once overly full, we reconvened at the cafe to watch the big soccer...err football game of that day. After more espresso, we returned home to relive the magic of Paris again the next day.

Every day went like this. We visited Notre Dame, Le Louvre, Chantilly, Versailles, Galleries Lafayette, The Latin Quarter, Montmartre and the Sacré-Cur Basilica, as well as wondering around Paris window shopping and people watching. We also drank more coffee in that week than ever before in our lives.

The group also visited the high school in St. Germain. We may have found another school that matches the "unique architecture" of WHS. Overall the trip was amazing. We made friends and memories that will last a lifetime. Our group would like to thank our two chaperones Mr. and Mrs. Fullerton, as well as Mme. Anderson for coordinating the whole trip. The experiences gained on this trip will never be matched, and no section in the textbook could ever teach us the true French culture that we learned in those ten days. C'était incroyable!

All together at the Louvre!

Trip to Italia!!

A week in Sorrento, Florence, and Rome!

This February vacation several AP Latin students along with Mrs. Tirone, head of the Foreign Language department, joined other students from Medford and Waltham high schools on a trip to Italy. After a very long eight-hour flight we landed in Roma, then took a shorter flight to Sorrento, the first stop on our ten day journey. Sorrento was a quaint town, in many ways like an Italian Winchester, and it was here we had our first taste of gelato! The ancient city of Pompeii was just a bus drive away and was our first official tourist stop. It was surreal to walk down streets and peer into houses that were just the way the people of Pompeii left them nearly 2,000 years ago. From Pompeii we hopped on the bus again and drove along the breathtaking Amalfi Coast until we stopped in Positano, a picturesque seaside town with plenty of small shops and, of course, gelato. After three days in Sorrento we took the high speed train traveling at 221 miles per hour to Firenze (Florence), the birthplace of the Renaissance. Florence was a beautiful city; our first sight was the Duomo: massive, grand, and yet incredibly intricate and complex. While in Florence we visited Michelangelo's David, the Pitti Palace—home of the Medici, and the Boboli gardens. Plenty of shopping was done along the Ponte Vecchio and also along the streets of Florence lined with hundreds of stalls and stores. When it was time to leave we were all sad to part with this living museum and its art-filled streets, but eager to press on and continue our adventure in Rome. After a short stop in San Gimignano, one of the best preserved examples of a medieval town and boasting fourteen remaining towers, we arrived in Rome. As the saying goes, "Rome wasn't built in a day", but in our first day alone we visited the Vatican Museum, Saint Peter's Basilica, the Colosseum, the Roman Forum, and the Pantheon. We threw coins in the Trevi Fountain, each and every one of us wishing to come back to Rome someday. More gelato that night made up for our tired feet! Our final day in Rome we visited an Italian high school, the Liceo Scientifico Nomentano, and met Italian students our own ages who were learning to speak English. Our group split up and attended different classes, and many new friends were made. Our final night in Italy we gathered in the hotel lobby to play trivia and answer questions about our trip, followed by one final stop for gelato. As we boarded our plane for Boston we were sad to be leaving such a beautiful country, but excited to have made so many new friends, and we all know we will return someday.

Humanities Trip to London!

For February break, 42 seniors did something a bit more than the average vacation: with several teachers and a boatload of luggage, they boarded a Red Eye plane to London and spent a week exploring the city and taking in all that it has to offer. The Senior Humanities classes, boasting about 80 students total, goes on this trip every year and it's something that many students look forward to for all four years of high school. Led by history teachers Chris Marques, Allison Kangas, and Katy Rees, and music teacher Chris Nickelson, the group visited everything from the theatre to the many pubs and restaurants lining the streets of London.

The seniors stayed at the homey Georgian House Hotel near Victoria station. Each morning would start with an 8:00 alarm and then a hot English breakfast served by the hotel staff, usually consisting of eggs, toast, peaches, and, of course, lots and lots of tea. "The tea in London is really, really good," said senior Colin Wall. "However, I wasn't too impressed with the porridge."

After breakfast, the group would leave the hotel and begin their day. Usually raining and downcast, the weather was fairly warm but wet. Still, the grass was green and the flowers in bloom- spring starts early in England. The mornings would generally find the group at a museum or historical building- for example, the National Gallery or the British Museum, or the Hampton Court Palace, home of several Kings and Queens from Britain's past. After the morning activity, students were given some free time to find some lunch and then would regroup for a mid-afternoon trip. Free time for dinner would follow, and then a planned event would take up the evening. The group went to the symphony twice, first to see Mozart's Requiem and then to see Vivaldi's Four Seasons. One night, the group went to see a play called "Penelope," a modern retelling of the Odyssey from the suitor's point of view. One student described it as, "interesting and engaging, but oh-my-god it was confusing. The intellectualism was off the wall." Another said, "It's not surprising, really, seeing as Mr. Rhatigan was the one who chose it."

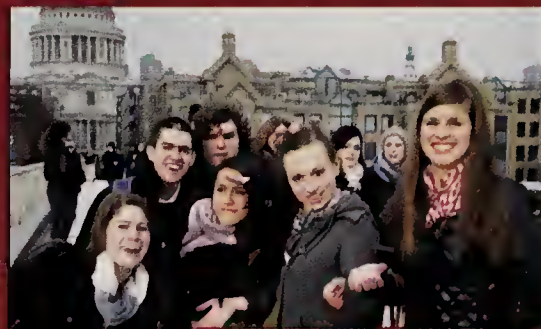

One highlight of the trip was the nighttime walking tour of Jack the Ripper's famed story; the group visited all of the sites of the historic killer's murders, led by a dramatic and engaging tour guide who seemed to breathe new life into Jack's unsolved mystery.

The group also took a trip to see the Tower of London, the royal ex-prison where the crown jewels are now stored in a vault marked "the most secure place in London." Old suits of armor and the history of Britain's royalty were found in the Tower, which is, oddly enough, not very tall and more of a castle than a "tower."

During the abundant free time, students had their own choice of activity. Some went to visit Abbey Road where the Beatles recorded and took the picture for the album of the same name; some chose to visit the Kew Gardens, where there are some of the largest greenhouses in the world, and 33,000 different types of plants, flowers, and trees. Other student-led trips included visits to the enormous Harrod's department store, Camden Market, the Victoria and Albert Museum, and the National Portrait Gallery where several students found lookalikes in the gallery's enormous collection.

The favorite spots in London? Mr. Marques enjoyed the tour of the Parliament building, which was equally beautiful, historical, and engaging; some said that they enjoyed the Churchill War Rooms, where Winston Churchill led Britain through World War II; it is preserved today in almost identical condition- all the way down to the ashtrays. Other students said that they simply enjoyed the feeling of being in London- the lights, sounds, and smells that the city has to offer. The trip, as usual, was a complete success. All who went learned new things and reveled in the thrill of being in a foreign country, an experience that is wholly unique. London, once again, hasn't disappointed WHS and its senior Humanities students. As a tired kid said on the way back from the trip, "It really is an incredible city. I feel like we could've been there for a month and never have gotten bored."

Facebook: Friend or Foe?

Article by Nivedha Kumar

For students, Facebook is our lifeline. We sign on a minimum of twice a day, chatting with friends, skimming through their pictures, posting videos, and much more. How else are we supposed to keep up with the latest news? More importantly, Facebook should be officially recognized as the number one procrastination method, withdrawing us from our homework and diverting our minds to social cyberspace. This social networking site definitely tops people's 'most frequented websites' list. Having said that, privacy is always a concern on the internet, especially if personal information such as pictures, birthdays, etc. are being shared. With more than 300 million active users, Facebook has experienced many breaches of privacy, prompting the creators of Facebook to rethink the website's layout and settings. Despite these efforts, security lapses still occur. So is the possibility of stalkers and virus attacks worth posting personal information and spending our time on the world's most popular social networking site?

Have you ever logged onto Facebook and been bombarded by friend requests from people you don't know? Or has your news feed ever been dominated by a conversation between two people? These instances appear to be minor and perhaps annoying, but the fact that unknown people can friend you and view your personal information can be scary. You might say, "But I have my Facebook on the highest privacy settings, no one can anyone possibly view my information unless I friend them." That may be true, but Facebook is constantly making changes to its privacy settings, and unless you update them, there is the possibility that your profile will not be protected to the degree you want it to be. Also, Facebook is the center of all business advertisements due to its huge fan base. As a result, these businesses link themselves to Facebook to market their products. A few months ago, the Wall Street Journal reported a case in which some of the most used Facebook apps, including the popular app "Farmville", transmitted Facebook user IDs to third-party companies. Even large, well-known companies such as Google's Double Click and Yahoo's Right Media received information from these users. Once the information is out there, the path is paved for scam artists and hackers to use this information to target your other accounts, like email and banking. Viruses are also a major concern when it comes to Facebook. No matter how secure the website is, hackers always find a way to spread worms and viruses and all it takes is one of your friends to click on an unknown link and the virus spreads. With the potential security lapses and interference of third parties, countries such as Syria and Iran have banned Facebook completely. Many Facebook users have also gone as far as to delete their accounts in protest of Facebook's lax privacy policies.

To balance out the disadvantages of Facebook, there are bound to be some pros as well. For example, you keep trying to remember the name of some kid you went to elementary school with who moved, and it's bugging you. After flipping through old yearbooks, you finally find his or her name. What do you do? Most of us would go on Facebook to look this person up and friend them. On Facebook, you have the ability to find old friends and reconnect with them. Keeping in touch with friends is made easy by simply chatting, writing wall posts, or sending messages. And let's face it, one of people's favorite pastimes is looking through friends' pictures when you have a major test to study for! It's fun to see pictures from a friend's recent vacation or pictures of their new puppy or what they did over the weekend. Facebook also allows users to keep family and friends updated with what's happening in their lives by posting statuses. Furthermore, users have the opportunity to join groups and find people with similar interests while sharing music and videos with friends. Also, many students would agree that Facebook chat proves to be useful if you have a question about schoolwork. The easiest thing to do is to go on Facebook and see if someone in your class is online. Lastly, you can learn a lot about a person from their profile, ranging from their favorite music to favorite quotations to their preferred movies and books. Overall, Facebook has earned its title as the second most visited website in the United States this year because of its usefulness when it comes to communicating with others.

So what's the verdict? Are the pros of Facebook enough to outweigh the possibility of losing your privacy? The answer might vary between different age groups. It is pretty obvious by the huge number of students who use Facebook that youngsters are willing to sacrifice some privacy in order to communicate with friends online. On the other hand, adults might be more aware of the consequences that come from revealing too much personal information on the internet. As a result, they could be more concerned about these privacy breaches than youngsters are. So you decide, is it worth spending tons of time on Facebook and posting personal information if it means that that information could be given to other sources?

Thank you to all the athletes who sent in articles and pictures!

CHEERLEADING

The WHS Cheerleaders braved the elements at all of the Football games this year, as they do every year without fail, but this year seemed to be teeming with changes and new opportunities for the squad. This year's squad was lead by new head coach Jackie Squelia. Jackie brought numerous changes with her to the squad including more regular and rigorous conditioning. The cheerleaders also broadened their horizons and spread their spirit to the soccer team. This year the cheerleaders made an appearance at almost all of Boys Varsity Soccer's regular season home games, and all of their playoff matches. Other changes included a new cheer created by squad member Sarah Craven. The cheer, named "Hit them High" by the squad, was choreographed jointly by Sarah and the squad's captains; Christina Sciucco, Emily Norton, and Jillian Stone. The Cheerleading program also saw considerable growth this year in interest and in participation. This year's squad of 24 cheerleaders was the largest Winchester High School has seen in approximately five years. The Cheerleading squad will miss its two graduating seniors Evelyn LaMuragulia and Christina Sciucco. Evelyn was a great addition to the squad, showcasing her gymnastic skills with a difficult and well executed tumbling pass at competition. Christina Sciucco will also be missed and will be remembered for her leadership as a captain. Junior Stephanie Kelly will also be missed as she has moved and will not be returning to the squad next season. Stephanie was a seasoned cheerleader who was known for her hard work at practice, and for her perfect execution of choreography. The squad looks forward to next season, where it will be led again by Captain Emily Norton and Jillian Stone as well as newly elected captain, Kristina Shattuck. Go Sachems!

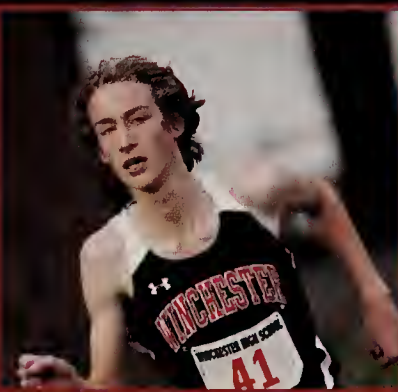

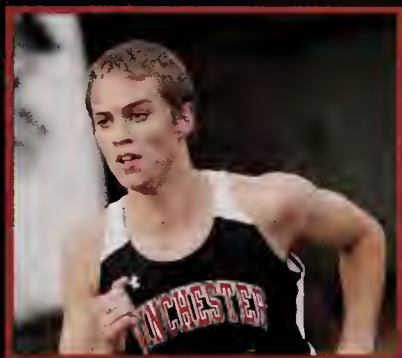

- Jill Stone

BOYS CROSS COUNTRY

Like every season, there were obstacles in the path of the 2010 Cross Country team. After beginning the season 2-0 and beating Lexington by a single point, Senior Captain Andrew Hintlian was diagnosed with a herniated disc in his back, but the team didn't back down. The next 7 meets proved that, posting an undefeated record for the third time in the program's history. However, the League Championship meet, where all ten teams race at the end of the season, has only been won once before by the Sachems, 27 years ago. This year's team faced the improving league without Hintlian. Nevertheless, the team rose to the challenge, and with the leadership of Captains James Anderson and Bobby Andrews and Coaches Joe Cantillon and Paul Masi, the Sachems went into the meet with one thing on their mind. "We knew that it would be a race between us and Lexington", said Anderson, "We needed everyone to step up". They did just that. The Sachems won both the League Meet and had a perfect 9-0 record for the first time since 1983. From the 72nd member to the 1st member, the incredible season was an entire team effort. - James Anderson

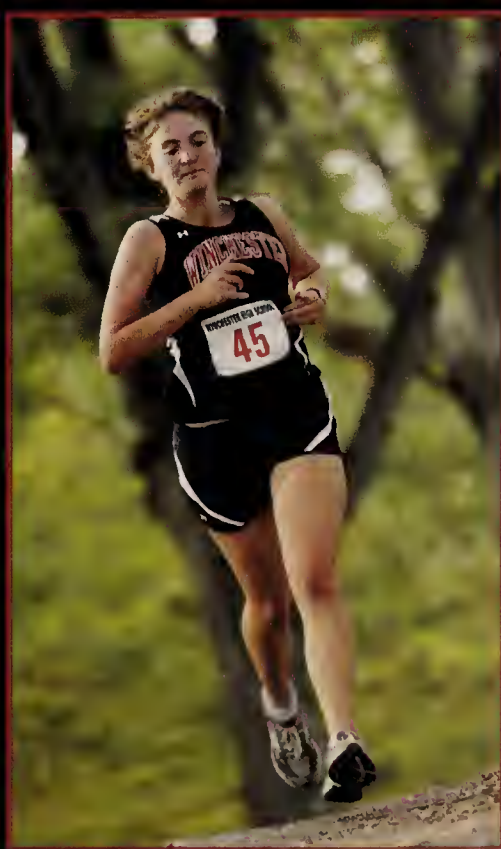

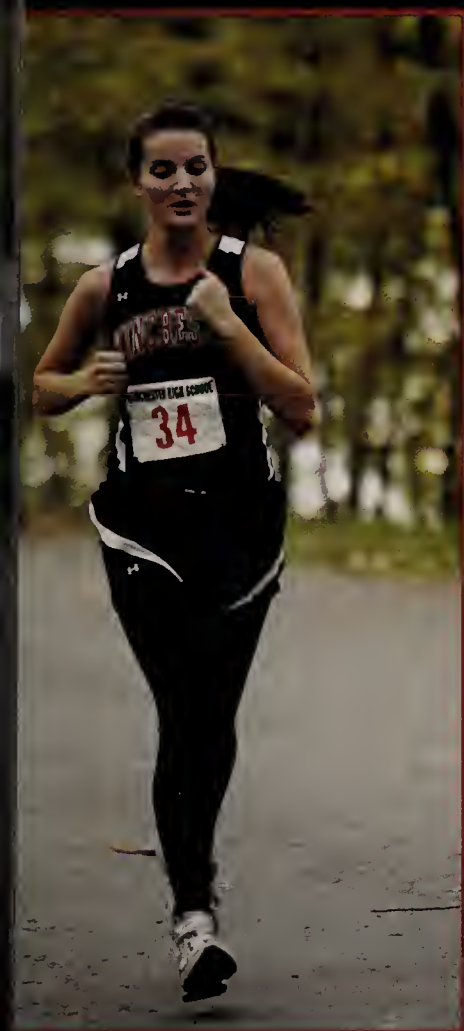

GIRLS CROSS COUNTRY

This year the Winchester Girls Cross Country team had an extremely successful year, ending the season 6-3-0. This season was not only defined by impressive team victories, but also the achievements each individual runner. The improvement of each member was evident. This progress can be credited to the vigorous practices Coach Cantillon and Assistant Coach Masi created to develop the team's speed and endurance. In addition to the distance running and sprints, one of the most stressed components of the practices was hills. The team quickly created the motto "We love hills!", and true to their word, many practices the girls could be spotted running up and down the steepest hills in Winchester. The team's accomplishments are also a reflection of each member's strong work ethic and the team's bond, in which the teammates encouraged and challenged each other. In the Eastern Massachusetts Divisional Championship, the Winchester Girls Cross Country team was again quite successful. Senior Rachel Unger held the lead, and the team placed eleventh in the Division 3 Girls race. The captains for the girls were: Katy McKeough, Meg Gotsell, and Molly Olmsted. At the end of the season, of the five Winchester runners to receive the Middlesex All-Star Award, two were of the girls team: Senior Rachel Unger and junior Melanie Manko.

- Melanie Manko

GIRLS FIELD HOCKEY

The 2010 season was a memorable and exciting one for the Winchester field hockey team. Led by senior captains Katelyn Castro, Melanie Coffin, Emily van Seventer, and Kristen Weiner, each girl was an important contribution to the success that the season would bring. Dedication in the off-season was impressive, and the team started to come together as a family long before the first game. Beginning in early September, the team was pitted against Reading, a strong rival competitor in the Middlesex League. But, as the team worked through their first match-up, they played impeccably, starting off the season with a shut-out win, 4-0 - a major highlight of the season. Utilizing the new turf field, hard work began on the first day of preseason and would continue through the last regular season game against Woburn, another win toward the final 11-4-3 record. These wins would place them in the State Tournament, an important team goal from the beginning. Their seed placed them against Pentucket, a powerful team whom they were able to beat 2-1 with the togetherness they had built all season long. Following this, they fell to the eventual State Champions, Watertown, but the sense of accomplishment still reverberated throughout the team. With Catherine Olsen's strong hit behind them, the defense was solid in each game. Annie DeRosa's talents as goalie truly shined through, recording over 25 saves in one game alone. Offense was strong with League All-Stars Melanie Coffin and Emily Savage helping to consistently score goals. Senior midfielders Angela Lombardi, Alexis Zavez, and Candace Mullane also did their part to give the team a solid core on the field. Though it may sound cliché, the team was more of a family, and bonded during team adventures like the white water rafting trip. Captain Coffin said it well when she stated, "It was a really successful season, seen through both our record and lasting friendships." With Coach White's passion for the sport, focus, and motherly leadership, she inspired the team to work hard. Along with Coach Kara's positive spirit and impressive talent, the two led this year's team to great success. The graduating seniors pass on the captainship to next year's leaders: Alyssa Aharonian, Annie DeRosa, and Hanna Pedego. The motivation of both the returning and upcoming players promises a lot of potential for next season, and they hope to build upon the successful foundation laid by this year's seniors. - Alyssa Aharonian

FOOTBALL

While the 2010 Sachems had a rocky start to the season, they finished strong, winning five of the last seven games. The Sachems were a talented team and lost their first four games by just a few points. Their fifth game versus Malden Catholic was the turning point in the Sachem's season. They entered the game as undersized underdogs. The Sachems scored on a thirteen minute opening drive, and won 7-6 due largely to the resilience of their defense, which had three goal-line stands. Matt Cleary (42) ended the game with a huge sack on MC's quarterback. The Sachems won four of their next six games, beating Melrose, Stoneham, Burlington, and most important, Woburn. The Thanksgiving Day game came down to the last eight seconds and ended with a stand by the Sachems defense. This was the third year in a row the Sachems have beaten Woburn. They ended the season with a 5-6 record.

This year the Sachems had a roster of some of the toughest, most hardworking seniors the team has ever known. Senior John Dunleavy must be credited for his amazing work as Assistant Coach, keeping the team fit and motivated to win. Captain Brandon Nowell (31) was the team MVP and missed only two tackles all year. Captain Alex Kohn (34) was Defensive MVP and at middle linebacker could always be trusted to save the game. Captain Will Herbert (11) was an Offensive MVP and always made mind-blowing catches when the team needed them most. Captain Rob Pontrelli (63) was a powerful force on the offensive and defensive lines. Captain Richard Mpanga (23) had more heart than anyone on the team; he exemplified the phrase "lead by example." Quarterback Greg Thompson (10) was an Offensive MVP and was twice named Player of the Week by the Boston Globe. The defensive line, which was so crucial in every Sachem victory, was anchored by three first-year starters-- three of the team's toughest players-- Tommy Cavaretta (52), Ryan McGoff (17), and Connor Steckel (64). Pat Norris (66), an undersized offensive guard was feared throughout the league for his explosive hits on the kickoff team. The offensive line was rounded out by tackles Brian Conley (53), with his passion and toughness, and Will Haggett (76), with his incredible growth as a player throughout the season. Josh Rodriguez (13) stepped in at running back midway through the season, and each game he played better than the one before, culminating in a seventy yard touchdown against Woburn. Scott Schwalbert (24) and Craig Rogan (28) were the team's weigh-room heroes, and it paid off on the field. Scott made numerous game saving tackles and Craig had a knack for making key interceptions. Kevin Spang (26) made the most impressive special teams play of the season when he recovered a kickoff after one bounce without breaking his stride. Nick Fuccillo (4) had incredible hands and took some hard hits, but never dropped a pass. Matt Cleary (42) epitomized a Sachem, he was always there to make the big play in the big game when it really mattered. Throughout the season this eclectic group of kids became a family.

The Sachems won all of their games in November and beat Woburn for the third year in a row on Thanksgiving Day, fulfilling their team chant, "I believe that we will win!"

- Rob Pontrelli

GOLF

In his tenth year of coaching at WHS, Tom Walsh directed the talented Sachem team to a successful and winning season. Led by senior captains Kevin Smith and Kate Heffernan along with junior captain Sam Oleksak, the Sachems finished with a 5-2-2 record in the Middlesex league, enabling them to qualify for the State tournament. This year's team had more experience and it showed with impressive wins over Melrose and Lexington as well as tough yet important ties with Burlington and league rival Woburn. The starting lineup for the fall of 2010, from one to eight, respectively, was Kevin Smith, Marshall Pontrelli, Chris Simpson, Kate Heffernan, Scott Carson, Derick DiVincenzo, Nick Trasatti and Sam Oleksak. "We had a very promising year. We made the state tournament for the first time since I came to the high school and added many great underclassmen players" said junior Nick Trasatti, a competitive and influential member of the team. These impressive and first-year underclassmen included sophomores West Shepherd, Connor Tedesco and Matt Ladd and freshmen James Quzor and Patrick Hallowell. While improving their golf game, players were fortunate to have the support and camaraderie of their teammates and competitors. "You meet some really great people from the various towns," said sophomore Marshall. Marshall, a confident and enthusiastic player, stepped up as an underclassmen playing at the second position for the season. "Being with the team in practice, matches, or even just hanging out at team dinners was an awesome experience. I love it!" Marshall added. The strong chemistry among the golfers contributed to their successful season. With only two seniors leaving, the Sachems look forward to a successful season in 2011. "We're going to have a number of strong seniors next season and will give Middlesex Champion Reading a run if everybody keeps working hard and improving their game. Under classmen are going to have to step up," said junior Scott Carson, a strong leader on the team. The returning players will help to continue the team's growth and bonding in the coming seasons.

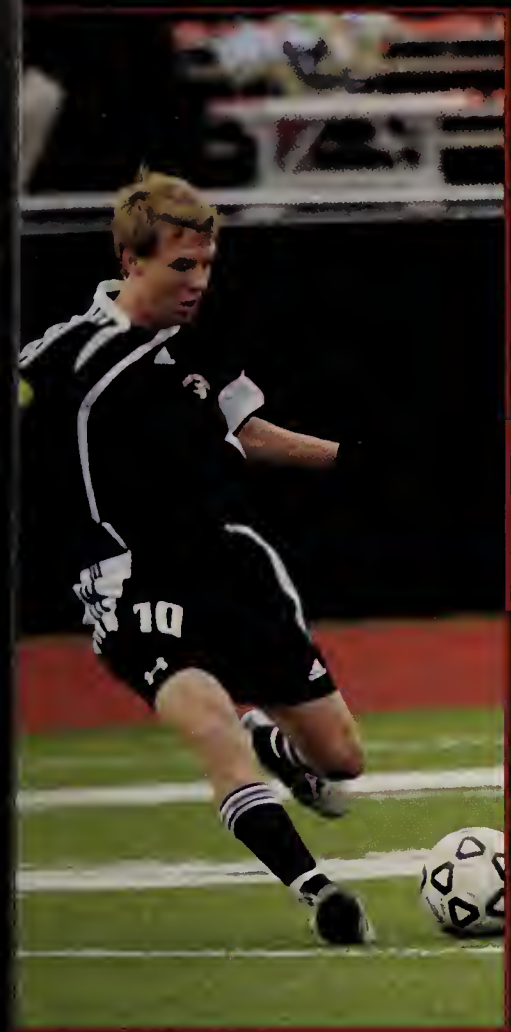

- Kate Heffernan

BOYS SOCCER

The Winchester Boys soccer team made history. Simple as that. They took the Middlesex League crown from former powerhouse Lexington, ending the regular season with a 16-0-2 record. They went undefeated at home and set the bar high for next year. The defense anchored by Captains Ben Bratt and Lubo Svetiev was impregnable, allowing only 9 goals in the regular season and 3 in the postseason. Goalie Andrew Shediak and sophomore Dan Boulanger put on impressive defensive displays as well. The midfield, led by Captains Ryan Connolly and Kevin DeSa, delivered phenomenal plays when called upon. However, many fine plays came from sophomore Marc Greenblatt who used his keen eye to detect his teammates. Forwards such as the incredible Conor Calnan and seniors Ben Davis and Brendan "Crazylegs" Doherty scored plenty of goals. The offense put up a total of 66 goals in the regular season and Lexington was a close second with 50 goals. It was an all around team effort from the starters to the bench. The crowd was never disappointed and even when it seemed the opposing team had no chance, they were entertained by the "Ben Bratt hair flip". -Lubo Svetiev

GIRLS SOCCER

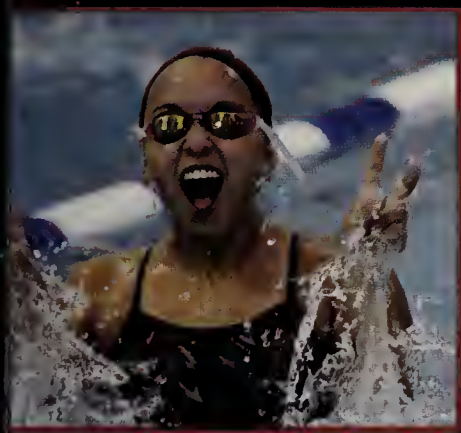

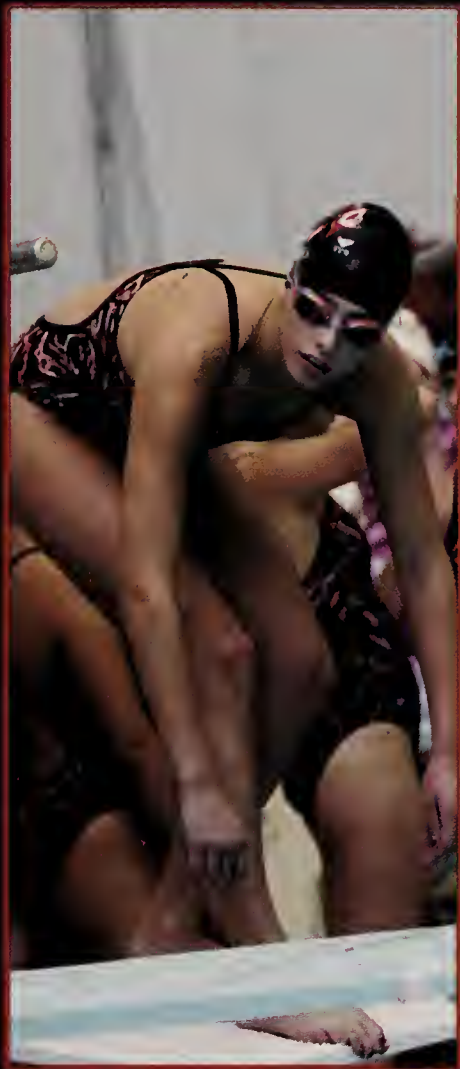

The 2010 girls varsity soccer team was different than past years, but still found much success. Although finishing 11-6 in the regular season, the losses were close, hard fought matches. One of the best games of the season came against Belmont. Having dropped the first game, the Sachems played a high energy game, holding on for the win. The four captains, Amy Castignetti, Olivia Gjestebj, Emily Aliberti and Shannon Quinn, led the team with pride and great soccer ability. The Sachems crushed their first two opponents in the tournament, Brighton and Somerville, but fell to Masco, 3-1, in a hard fought, third round game. The Sachems were coached by Chris Scanlon, goalie coach Amy Montgomery, and assistant coach, Barry Sheer. Next year the Sachems will look to win a league championship and continue their dominating ways. - Annie Langlois

GIRLS SWIMMING

What do you get when you wake up thirty-six high school girls at 4 in the morning? The WHS Girls' Swim Team of course! Despite their constant sleep deprivation during the fall season, the team managed to finish their 2010 season with a 4-4 record. The team faced many obstacles including swimming in the three feet deep Woburn Boys and Girls Club pool, and gaining an entirely new coaching staff for the second time in a row. Nevertheless, the team overcame these obstacles and was able to come out strong. Led by head coach Diana Matthews, assistant coach Rick Menard, and captains Sarah Barnabei, Julia Breckwoldt, Kelly McCarthy, and Kate Wendell, the team swam themselves to fourth place at League Meet. One of the most important assets to a team is a great coaching staff. "Diana and Rick are the main reason for our success," says McCarthy. "They believe in us and push us until we reach our goals." With the help of their coaches, the girls worked hard and put a lot of effort into swimming fast and achieving their best times. Like many of the WHS teams, the girls took part in its share of team bonding. Apple picking, dressing up, crazy bus rides, and the early morning carpools created a close-knit group of girls who were drove to swim like crazy. "Over the course of the season, all of the girls truly became great friends," says Barnabei. "We had such an awesome time TP-ing, dressing up before the meets, having sing-a-longs on the bus, and of course, and waking up at 4am for practice." As always, the meet against long time rival Reading was a tough battle, but this year it was the Belmont meet that the team was truly "pumped and jacked" for! The team cheered on and supported each other as they gave it their best, but unfortunately in the end it was Belmont who came out on top. "This year, Belmont was a really big meet for us," says junior Olena Kowal. "I think this year we really stepped up and brought everything we had to offer, making it an exciting meet to swim in." The Sachems finished their season with a strong victory over Woburn, where many of the girls swam their best times and placed first in their respective events. The team sent five swimmers to the Division II North Sectionals as well as the Division II States Meets, including sophomore Rachel Asaro, juniors Olena Kowal and Julia Baynes, and seniors Kate Wendell and Kelly McCarthy. All of the girls swam their hearts out and posted amazing times. All in all, the grueling 4am wakeup calls has not been a detriment to this team. The girls swam their way to achieve greatness, in the water and out. They look forward to continuing their success next season! - Sarah Barnabei

GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

During its third year as a varsity sport, the Girls Volleyball Team exceeded expectations with a record of 9-8 and continued on to the quarter finals of the Division II State Tournament. The team was led by captains Amy Wright, Samantha Mangano, and Katie Constatine, who greatly contributed to the team's success, on and off the court. Senior Captain Wright believes that, "We made so much progress this year as a team and as a program. All of the girls worked so hard this season, and it has been a privilege for me to watch them grow and improve as players for the last three years. I am so proud of this team and all that we have accomplished." This year's seniors, Katie Constantine, Taylor Field, Jazmin Gonzalez-Rivero, Samantha Mangano, Lydia Olson, and Amy Wright all greatly contributed to the team's winning season and their dedication will be greatly missed. Captains Amy Wright and Samantha Mangano were also selected to be members of the league All Star Team, the second year in a row for both players. This was the first year as Varsity Coach for John Fleming who worked hard to help the team achieve its fullest potential. Senior Captain Mangano stated that the season's success was due to the players' ability to "connect as a team, no matter what the situation." One of the best examples of this was the team's game against Lexington, an event which they called Serve for the Cure. Not only did they come together to beat their competition in one of the season's most exciting games, but they also raised over $1200 for the Susan G. Komen Foundation through a fundraiser which they hope to continue for years to come. The team's chemistry and dedication to improvement played an important role in its success and Coach Fleming summed up the season with: "Our three captains and seniors helped start the program and made it to the second round of the state tournament two years in a row. They should be proud of all they have accomplished with a brand new program. They leave some very big shoes to fill." With the talent and dedication that the team gained this year, there is no doubt that the players will continue to grow and succeed in the upcoming seasons.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The Sachems boys basketball had a very successful winter season, finishing at 12-11 after winning two games in the division 2 tournament. Following the last two seasons, where the sachems won a combined 5 games, the boys were able to get back to the tournament. Led by senior captains Caleb Unni and Garrett Dagle, and junior captain Pete Miller, they finished the regular season at 10-10, landing them a 16 seed in the tournament. The Sachems hit their stride in the postseason, beating Malden Catholic in the first round by 3, and then upsetting the #1 seed Wilmington by 9. This set up a match-up with Brighton at The Boston Latin Academy. Despite a 14 point comeback late in the fourth quarter to tie the game, the Sachems could not continue their run as they lost the game by 3. The success the Sachems endured this season helped proved that they are back at the top of the always difficult Middlesex League. - Peter Miller

GIRLS BASKETBALL

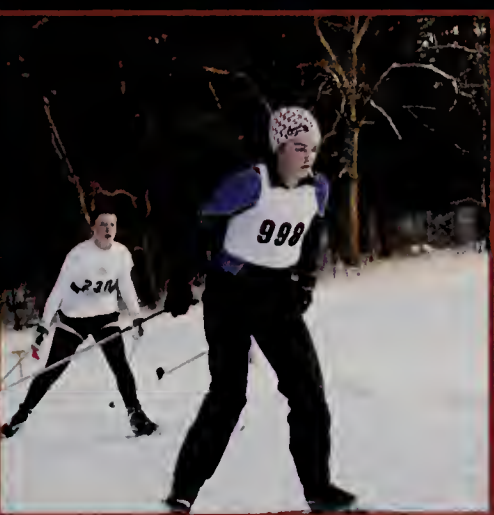

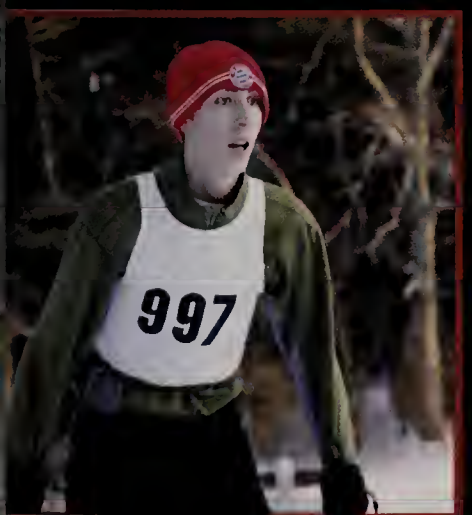

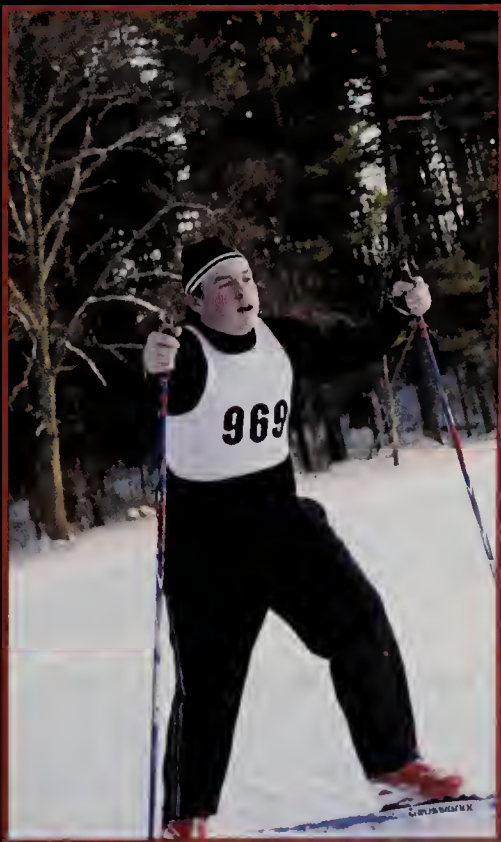

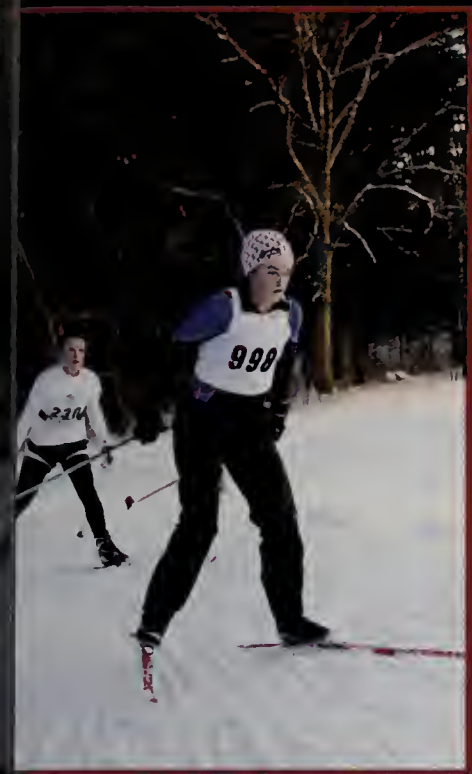

It was a great season for the WHS girls basketball team this year. The team made it to the second round of the state tournament and almost beat the number one seed, Reading. The two co-captains of the team were Sam Mangano and Shelby Santini. Katelyn Weber and Olivia Macrorie were the other two seniors on the team. The team also had two dedicated managers Jackie Kazazian and Nicole Vermes. There were four sophomores: Catherine Pitts, Elise Testa, Sophie Debler and Aurora Connolly. Three freshman completed the team. They were Olivia Gaither, Deirdre Macrorie and Lia Gizzi. All of the girls worked really hard to make the season successful. The team had a rough start with a number of injuries but persevered. Shelby Santini now holds the record of most points scored for a Winchester High School girls basketball team with 739 points. Sam Mangano was nominated as a MacDonald All American. Katelyn and Olivia fought tirelessly under the boards. Some wish for it. We work for it. - Olivia Macrorie

CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING

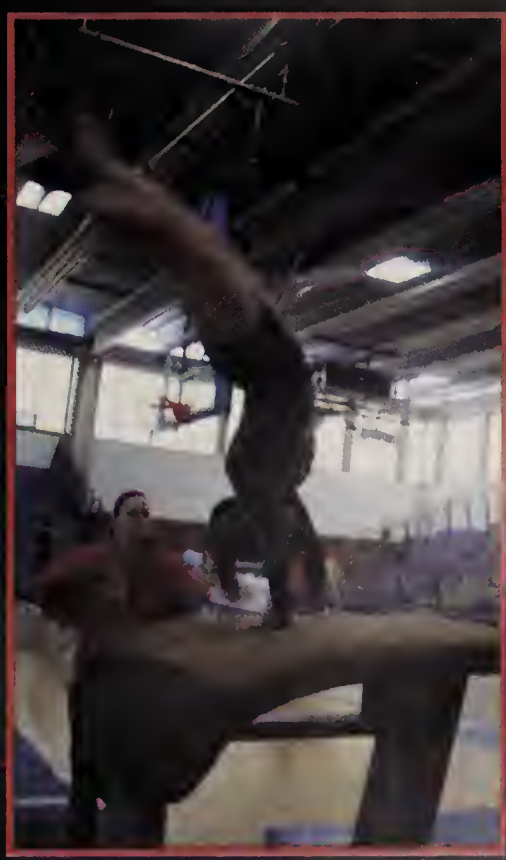

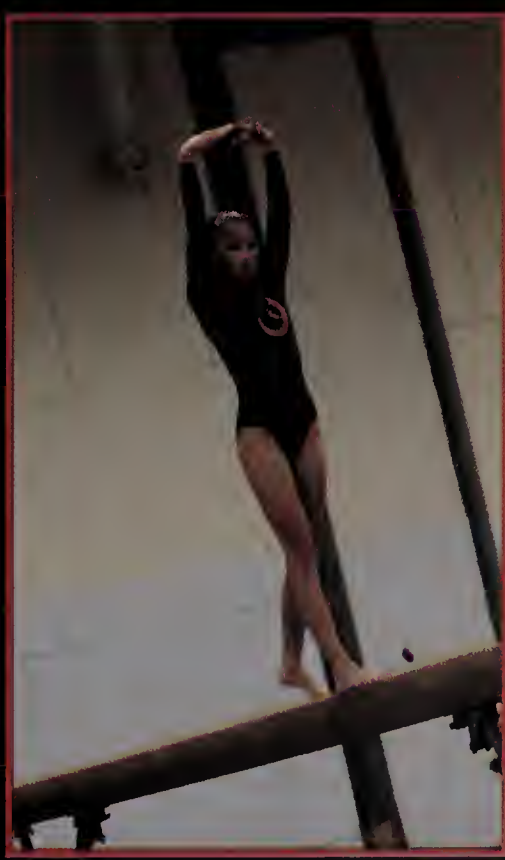

As the winter season started to approach, Coach Carlson worked hard to create a cross-country ski team that would have more than just two kids on it. Only being the second year that the team had existed, the team rose from having two kids representing WHS in ski races to a magical number of fifteen. Despite the fact that over half of the team had never stepped foot on cross-country skis before, the team was very successful. Helping the others that were new to cross-country skiing, captain Sam Stratton, and coach Carlson encouraged everyone on the team to try their best and taught through example. While the goal of many skiers on the team was just to finish the races, many other kids on the team came close to winning them. Even though there was a difference in skiing ability, the team got along wonderfully, and planned many exciting team dinners that centered around their favorite restaurants. The boys and girls on the cross-country team bonded throughout the season and supported each other on and off the snow. Although it was intimidating to see the other cross-country ski teams that had all matching-spandex uniforms, and the ability to ski down hills on just one leg, the team never backed down from the challenges that faced them and never gave up. Even though at times it seemed like the kids on the other teams had rockets on the end of their skis, Winchester was always the team that was laughing and smiling. The kids on the team improved incredibly throughout the season and ended up being able to ski 6 miles without falling, while in the beginning of the season many could not even go a foot without tumbling to the ground. In fact, many times the skiers on WHS cross-country ski team would fall even when they were just standing still, which took true talent. Whether someone had finished a race with a great time, or someone had taken a fall, the team was always having a great time being with each other. The team was co-ed and had seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshman on it, which created a very unique experience for the team. The WHS cross-country ski team made history this season with the first girl ever in the history of Winchester, Molly Olmsted, finishing in the cross-country ski race. The growth the team made throughout this year is tremendous and the friendships and experiences shared by the team created an unforgettable season for 2010-2011 Winchester cross-country skiers. -Marissa Wiegner

GYMNASTICS

Gymnastics is a sport that requires a certain type of commitment, dedication and drive that has been demonstrated by every gymnast on the WHS gymnastics team. This year the team was led by the three senior captains, Evelyn LaMuraglia, Celia Litchfield and Brianna Spezzaferri who all put forth every effort to ensure a promising and successful season. The gymnastics team started off strong by defeating their opening meet against Reading Memorial High School 128.05-126.5. This meet set the stage for yet another impressive season. As well as beating Reading Memorial High School, the team excelled to win against Wakefield, Stoneham and Woburn. "Gymnastics is a one of a kind sport; it requires determination and reliance on the team as a whole, not only the individual" said by Captain LaMuraglia. By the end of the season the team was able to pull off a record breaking 136 points at the Middlesex League Championships and landing in forth place. This year there were two qualifiers from the WHS gymnastics team to move on to State Championships; sophomore Carrie Abraham for vault and uneven bars and senior Evelyn LaMuraglia for the all around. The combination of the new freshmen and the returning team members made it possible for the sachems to triumph throughout this whole season. The WHS gymnastics team would not have come this far without the help of the head coach, Candice Vangelist. "I can't stress enough how proud I am. I'm honored to say that I coached such an outstanding group of kids" said Vangelist. Candice has always dedicated countless hours to focus on the team as a whole while concentrating on the individual's strengths to help the team succeed. Regardless of the situation, the WHS gymnastics team is known for its good sportsmanship. "We were not afraid to fail, because we know that if we did falter at a meet there will always be a time to redeem ourselves and show the league what we are really made of" said Captain Spezzaferri. The seniors this year wish the best for all the members of the gymnastics team for next season! - Evelyn LaMuraglia

BOYS HOCKEY

The Winchester Boys Varsity Hockey Team had a very successful season finishing with a final record of 14-7-1. They finished third in the Middlesex league behind only Reading and Woburn. The Sachems made a run in the Division 1 State Tournament beating Waltham and St. Johns Shrewsbury before falling to St. Mary's of Lynn in the semifinals. The team was led by Captain Peter Troiano and Assistant Captain Ryan McGoff. The Sachems had strong play in net all year from senior goaltender Jed Robinson who kept them alive in many close games. The team had to adjust to a new coach this year after long time coach John Messuri stepped down. Former JV coach Matt Spang stepped in as the new varsity coach and quickly got the team on track. Spang focused on defense, hard work, discipline, and heart and the team bought into his systems leading to another successful season. Among the leading scorers on the team was senior forward Colin Edwards who led the offensive attack for the Sachems. Other seniors, including Nick Ducharme, Danny Donovan, Matt Gehrig, and Eddie Dorr helped to add strong depth to the team. The team had 12 seniors this year and is losing a lot of key players. Younger players are going to have to step up and work hard in the off season to keep the winning tradition alive for the Boys Hockey Team. - Scott Carson

GIRLS HOCKEY

Coming into the season this year, the Girls Hockey Team knew that it wasn't going to be a walk in the park. The league was stronger and we had some big shoes to fill from last year. However, this did not stop any of us from playing our game. The season opened with a tie game against Reading followed by a tough loss to Stoneham. However, our next game stunned many. We had tied Lexington with only seconds left to make it a 2-2 final. Two big wins followed as we skated past Belmont and Wakefield to advance our record to 2-1-2. During the tournament, the hockey team's skills were really on display. Our first opponent was Belmont a team we had beat twice in the regular season. It was tournament, a time where anything can happen no matter what happened in regular season. During most of the Belmont game we were getting out worked and out hustled. Going into the third we were down, 2-0. Time passed fast and before we knew it there was only 2 minutes left in the game. We called a time out for we had a face off in their end. We won the puck back to the wing who sent it over to Katherine Zavez and she ripped a shot by the goalie. Now time was less and it turned into a nail biter of a game. With less than a minute left we skated up the ice into Belmont's zone. What came next no one could believe. We tied it up to send the game into overtime. This was probably the longest 5 minutes of all of our lives. It finally ended for no one scored and we sent the game into a shoot out. Each of our 3 players scored for us and Meg Creane played amazing stopping each player that came down. This sent us into the next round where we had to play number one seed Norwood. Norwood already wasn't a big fan of us for what happened last year and they were out for revenge, and they got it. The game was great but they were just able to put their chances away. Although our record ended up being 10-10-2 it certainly didn't reflect the season. Each and every game we played like it was our last and had fun doing it. We had the biggest group of hard workers and we're proud to say that. Graduating captains Michaela Chiuccariello and Mary O'Donnell will be missed, but we're confident in the team's great ability. Good luck next season! - Michaela Chiuccariello

GIRLS INDOOR TRACK

As in many previous years, the 2011 Girls Winter track team was a predominantly young team, with over 45 out of the 63 girls on the team being underclassmen. Despite having so many new athletes compared to the other teams in the Middlesex League, the team was able to make some impressive accomplishments. Seven members of this year's team qualified to compete in the Division 2 State Meet, where many received new personal records. Senior Rachel Unger ran a personal best in the 1 Mile race (although she qualified for both the 1 Mile and the 2 Mile races), and was also selected as a Middlesex League All-Star. Sophomore Savannah Kinchen also gained a new personal record in the 1000 meter race and fellow sophomore Claire Aalerud performed very well in her 2 Mile race. The shotputting group also had great performances, with sophomores Jackie Vahey and Emmalee Morton, as well as juniors Kianna Phillips and Sarah Craven competing in the State Meet. The shotputters had a great season, contributing points at every meet, and even taking all three places at 4 out of the 5 dual meets. With the help of Coach Caito, the girls have greatly improved, as evidenced by the fact that so many of them qualified to compete in the State Meet. As always, Coach Cantillon motivated the team to stay competitive and work hard. With such a young team, underclassmen, many times sophomores, were either the 1st or 2nd (and in some cases both) competitor in most events. The abundance of young and dedicated athletes on the team provides a great deal of potential for the Girl's Winter Track Team in future years and Coach Cantillon continues to motivate the girls to work hard and challenge themselves. As always, the Middlesex League remains competitive, and the team hopes to recruit and improve their performances in order to face their competitors next year.

This year's captains Katelyn Castro, Olivia Gjestebj, Clara Lauterwasser, and Dana Tremallo pass the torch onto Carolyn Burnham, Jessica Geist, and Sarah Craven, knowing that the team will be in good hands next year.

- Dana Tremallo

BOYS INDOOR TRACK

This winter track season went pretty well, ending with a record of 5 wins and 4 losses. Captains James Anderson and Bobby Andrews did a great job of inspiring the team to perform at its best level. The team had some great performances throughout the season, with two league Champions: James Anderson in the 600 meter, and Mike Miller in the high jump. The boys who qualified for the division two state meet were James Anderson in the 600, Bobby Andrews in the 300, Max Tirey in the hurdles, Kevin Spang and Will Herbert in the dash, Brendan Creane in the 1000, Will Haggett in the shot put, and Michael Miller in the High Jump. The only one to place for the team was Miller jumping 5'11" and taking 7th for Winchester. Yet in the regular season, several outstanding athletes almost made the qualifying marks for states such as Jeffrey Burka, Pat Franco, and Anthony Christopher who both put up valiant efforts in the distance events. Overall the season was pretty successful, almost beating Reading in the dual meet. However after some disappointing performances at states we are all looking forward to the spring season as we have a lot of new recruits with a bunch of potential. - Mike Miller

SKI TEAM

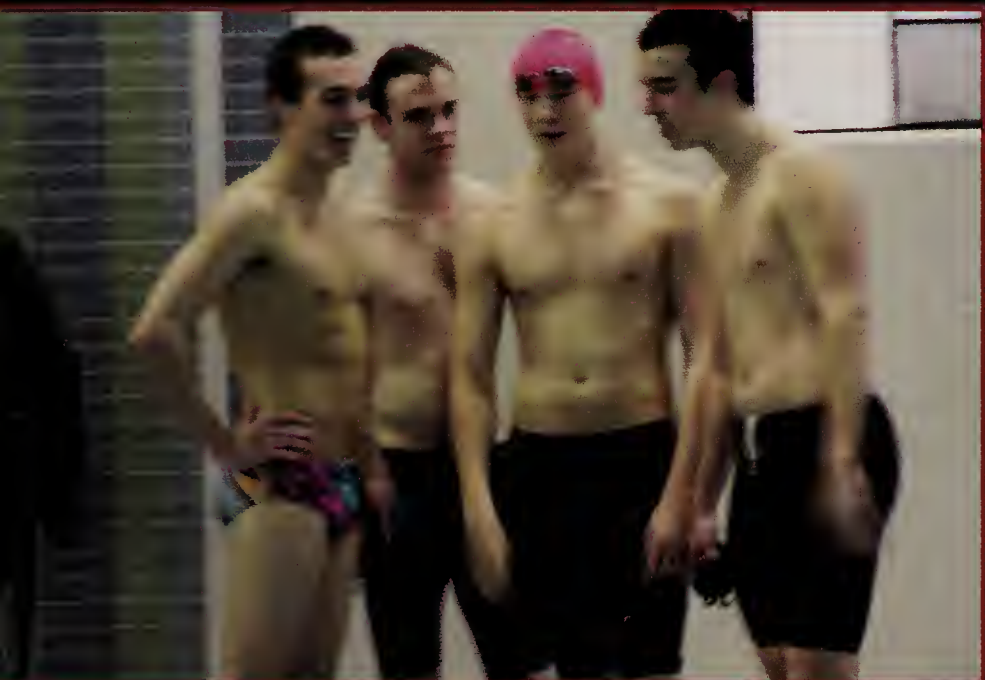

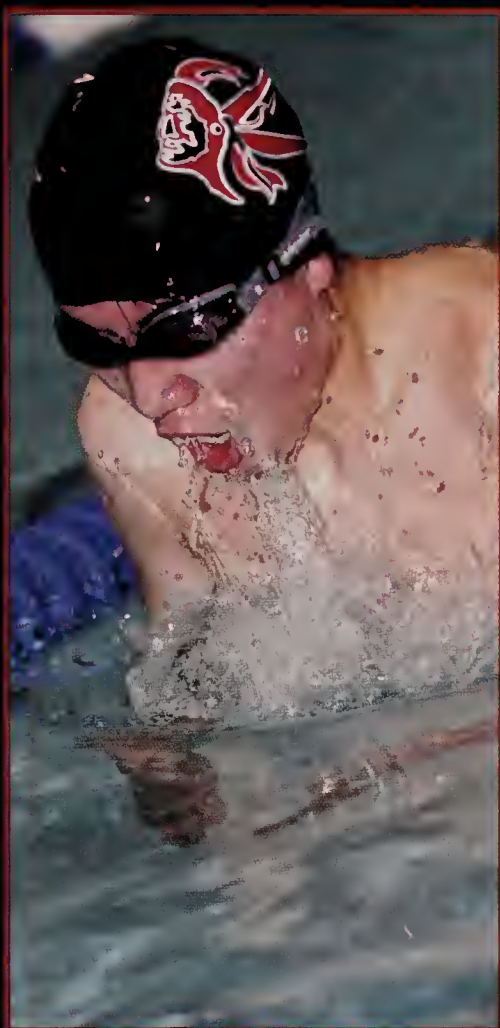

It all started when three sophomores proposed the idea of a ski team to their athletic director in 2009. The three all skied in New Hampshire together and were constantly hearing stories of their friends on their high school teams. Jealous of mid-week skiing, the students began work to form their own team. By November of their junior year, the team had some funds, a spot in the Mass Bay East Omega League, and a number of skiers signed up. Skiers travelled to Nashoba Valley Ski Area twice a week; once for training, and once for races. 2009-2010 was the first ever season of the Winchester High School ski team, so it was more of a set up year. This past season, we had skiers compete fiercely in every race and had two female racers qualify for States. Senior captain, Ed Batten said, "We had a lot of fun and I was glad to have some of the boys from last year back. I'm sure next year they can all get extremely competitive and win some races." This season the team progressed and made itself more known in its new league, however, we grew closer to one another as well. During practice days, instead of hours of free skiing, we trained gates which gave new skiers a chance to feel more comfortable ski racing. In addition, the captains were proud to see teammates helping one another with technique and asking many questions to improve their skiing abilities. As senior captain, Jess Rice says, "It was a great season and hopefully the team will continue to grow and develop!" Since the three founding members are graduating this year, the team looks to its new captains and supportive coach, Matt James, to carry on the team next year. As rising sophomore Sophie Olmsted says, "Ski team has the potential to get big!" Looking back, senior captain, Molly Olmsted said, "when I first joined our ski team in New Hampshire, I was racing down the hill to catch up with everybody. I found that simply trusting myself to go faster improved my skiing. I hope that the WHS ski team can provide that same experience to newer skiers and create the same love for skiing that I have always had." Leaving the team in the capable hands of underclassmen, Ed Batten, Jess Rice, and Molly Olmsted leave future skiers with a few simple words; "Go Fast or Go Home!" - Molly Olmsted

BOYS SWIMMING

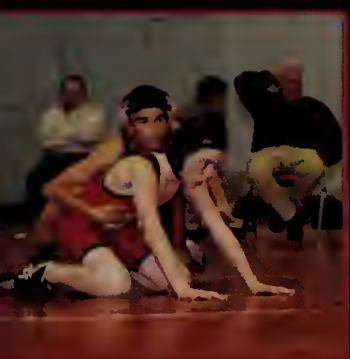

This year, the Varsity Boys Swim Team, lead by Captains Michael Croteau and Eammon Garber, completed its season with a winning record of 3 – 2. Early morning practices began in late November at the Woburn Boys and Girls Club. For most of the boys, practicing at 5 AM was a first. Nonetheless, the swimmers practiced hard all season. In December, the team competed in dual meets against Reading and Lexington and recorded its only two loses of the season. In January, the swim team won meets against Burlington, Melrose, and Belmont, ending the season with a winning record. Unfortunately, the Middlesex League swim meet was canceled and the season ended in early February. Some team members continued practicing until the Sectional and State Meets at the end of the month, including Michael Croteau, Dale Gable, Eammon Garber, Andrew Hintlian, Brian Reid, Carlton Schmidt, and Kalin Stoyanchev. In addition to a successful season, the team had three successful fundraisers. Money was raised during the High School's open house in September, at the Veteran's Day Soccer Tournament in November, and with the Dump Run in January. The team has a bright future, with two new coaches who should be with the team long term. Next year's Captains are Ahmad Greene-Hayes, Brian Reid, and Kalin Stoyanchev. Best of luck in the 2011-2012 season! - Michael Croteau

WRESTLING

Under the guidance of head coach Larry Tremblay, this year's grapplers had yet another successful season, claiming their 18th Middlesex League Title and posting an impressive record of 25-2-1. Seniors Michael Stern and Captain Don Muir placed at the Sectional tournament and wrestled well in the State Tournament. Captain Brandon Nowell and Senior Vinnie McBeck were both Sectional Finalists and also advanced to the state tournament. Senior Captain Ryan MacDonald, was the Sectional Champion at the 140 lbs. weight class and was named the outstanding wrestler of the tournament. He would go on to the New England Wrestling Championships after placing 3rd in Division II and 5th at the all-states. Steven Spry, Quinn Gregory, and Captain Nick Cashion also wrestled well in the postseason with Spry reaching States, Gregory reaching all-states and Cashion going the New Englands. They will look to continue the teams winning tradition next year. - Nick Cashion

ORCHESTRA

Whether it's Mozart, Beethoven, or something a little more modern, Dr. McCann has the students of the various orchestras making music, and having fun! The orchestra room emits a friendly vibe as soon as you enter it with students happily playing their instruments and Dr. McCann standing in front of the class, well dressed and full of humor as always. The orchestra students have had a busy year this year with many of them going down to Scituate to play a benefit concert for the Mission of Deeds. Many students in the orchestra also went to Disney World along with members of the Band or Chorus. Orchestra is a favorite class for many, with some people, like senior Abby Shewalter, even going so far as to take two orchestra classes in their schedules. If you are ever down in the music wing, it would be a good idea to stop by the orchestra and see for yourself what they do.

Jazz Band

"Playing for Pricilla Miller in the Jazz Band during my years at Winchester High School was a life changing, character building experience that would be impossible to forget." This was said by Richard Sampson class of 1983. He was lead trumpet in the Jazz Band and a drum major for the Marching Band. What he is saying could not be truer for the students who choose to be members of the committed group. There are no words to describe the feeling of being in a community of 20 or so students working towards a common goal and who share a love for playing music.

In the beginning of the year during football season, the Jazz Band joins the Concert Band in marching in parades and cheering on our wonderful football team. On Thanksgiving Day the group marched out onto the field at half time and preformed a show consisting of Michael Jackson, Lady Gaga and even dancing, zombie style. We marched on our beautiful new field and then returned to the bleachers where we watched our incredibly successful football team pummel Woburn 19 to 14. After every game it is a tradition to go as a group to Bickfords to reminisce about the game, the half time show and see how much time it took to gain back the feeling in our fingers. The end of the football season is always a sad time, there are no more Wednesday night practices in the gym struggling to learn how to dance and play at the same time; and no more long Saturdays with friends playing in the bleachers and eating hot dogs.

The end of the season brought about time for the Jazz Band to dedicate 67 minutes every G block to learning the repertoire of hundreds of songs collected over decades. The music we play ranges from 1950's jazz classics such as "In the Mood", to timeless ballads such as "Blue Skies" to popular rock pieces such as "Play That Funky Music". At this point in the year the Jazz Band is preparing for the winter concert. We join the concert band for a couple pieces and then play a few as an individual group this year including "Walking in a Winter Wonder Land" and "Barracuda Bay".

In the beginning of the year the group was divided into different levels of music theory in order to allow every member continuous progression. The different groups learn everything from major scales to seventh chords. The art of improvising is always improving and students are everyday becoming better musicians.

With spring around the corner it is an exciting part of the year for the seniors in the group. The students begin to hear back from colleges and are anxious to start the next period in their lives. However, as the year winds down the thought of handing over your priceless music and beautiful Selmer mark 6 saxophone has the power to bring even the hardest souls to tears. Playing "Weekend in Monaco" last block on a warm Friday afternoon for the last time is an extremely emotional event for the seniors in the committed group. Most of the students have been learning music from Miss. Miller since the first note they played in 4th grade. It is hard for many members to picture an academic life without her there making music a priority and a passion. Luckily with the end of the year come the events that the Jazz Band has been preparing for all year.

In April comes the dance at the Jenks Senior Center put on by the High school's honors society. Next comes the Strawberry Pops where everyone in town who share a common love for music come together to reminisce about the year and eat strawberry short cake while listening to wonderful music. Awards are given to the seniors and it is a time for both the students and the teachers to reflect on the experience of the past four years. After graduation comes the night the Jazz Band has been preparing for all year, the "In the Mood" dance at St. Eulalie's church. We play our favorite Pieces of music for hours while dozens of people dance, drink punch and eat an elegant selection of deserts. After the dance the group piles into the cars of the seniors and head to Bickfords for a late meal. We talk about how the past four years has pushed us as musicians and how it has been an experience that we would never forget. We reflect on how far we have come and what wonderful friends we have made. We think about how in twenty years the when we have children of our own in high school we will look back on those years with the memories of the Jazz Band in our heads and smiles on our faces.

Concert Band

Band is quite possibly the greatest music program ever seen on the face of the earth. Ms. Miller is the undisputed master of the domain of the band room – and through a combination of fear, endurance, and lollipops, all who join either Jazz Band or Concert Band succumb to the force of her will. Ms. Miller is more than just a strong teacher, though – she is also an incredible storyteller. Indeed, despite having already heard the story, many upperclassmen still enjoy hearing of the Disney corporation's dirty tricks to get you to buy popcorn and the legions of flutes the marching band once had. One of the things most notable about marching band is the music we play. Football is known for being a rough, gritty sport, and bands typically play upbeat celebratory music to boost the atmosphere. The Winchester marching band plays perennial favorites such as Western Pax; however, Ms. Miller also uses pop music in her marching band ensemble. In the past we played such hits as "September", "Hot Hot Hot", and "Cheeseburger In Paradise". Perhaps most notably, this year we played a tribute to both a rising star and an extinguished one, playing Lady Gaga's "Bad Romance" and Michael Jackson's "Thriller" and "Billie Jean". Quite simply, band is the place to be if you love playing music and think you can handle Ms. Miller. (Hint: you can't. Nobody can.)

Disney Trip 2011!!

This year the Music Department went to Disney World during the first week of March. Students and faculty had the chance to escape the cold and enjoy the warmth of sunny Florida. Everyone was dispersed among three different flights and arrived to Orlando, Florida late Wednesday night on March 2. Everyone stayed at the All Star Music resort and was able to go to the four theme parks: Magic Kingdom, Animal Kingdom, Hollywood Studios, and Epcot. While everyone was able to go on rides and buy souvenirs, they performed on stage in Downtown Disney Friday. Orchestra, chorus, and band did a phenomenal job playing music there even though a violent wind was blowing through the entire time, almost blowing away the music sheets on the stands. Even though this trip is tons of fun, it only happens once every four years.

The Chambers

The Chamber Singers is one of Winchester High Schools Acapella Groups which focuses mainly on chamber music ranging from the 15th to the 21st century. They have performed in many local concerts and even venues such as Scituate.

The Octets

The Octets is one of the two a cappella groups at WHS, made up of talented students from grades 10-12 with a shared passion for singing. Being in the group requires both dedication and hard work; aside from performing, members also arrange all of the popular songs for which the group is known. The Octets are also responsible for representing WHS while singing outside of the school at benefits, in local businesses, and most importantly at the Spring and Fall A Cappella Fests, both of which are hosted by the Octets. This year, there are many more new members in the group than in the past several years, and the fresh group dynamic has helped us to work harder than ever at perfecting our sound, and representing the high standards of WHS at every performance.

FEATURED ARTISTS FROM

JAMIE HUNTINGTON

Thick smoky chalk marks smouldering like radiation, radiating, in places suffused with light and strictly sharp, elsewhere murky, ambiguous. Skeletons and garden gnomes, animal skulls, and draperies, senior Jamie Huntington works at both accurately depicting and abstractly interpreting the current elaborate still-life set up in the center of the art room.

Now a Senior Honors Art student, Jamie first became interested in art about three years ago. A frequent hangout of Jamie's during his freshman year, the art room became more than just a space for him to mill around in; it became a space for him to create in, and he came to love it. As he says, "eventually it just grew on me, and I started drawing. Then I just kinda developed a love for it because it took my mind off everything else and allowed me to just relax and do something productive."

While he works almost exclusively in charcoal and chalks, captivated by the depth of shadow and by the smoothness of texture which both can achieve, Jamie is still open and "excited to try to use some other mediums this year." He gets his ideas for drawing subject matter and technique from a variety of sources, delving into the great recesses of the world wide web and the massive inventory of artists featured there. Not eager to pigeon-hole himself or to dwell too long on any one idea, Jamie says that his "inspiration comes from all over the place. A lot of the time I'm just looking around online and I stumble across some artist's page and I'm like 'Whoa, this is really cool. I never would have thought of how to do that.' I've found tons of my ideas through just browsing the internet."

The role which art plays in Jamie's life is a prominent one, a means of better communication. Art is important to Jamie "because it's one of the only ways I've been able to express myself. I never talked to people much. Art let me put my emotions into something I could understand and show to people." It is refreshing to see the making of art approached with sincerity and respect, rather than with the feigned indifference or with the excess of humility that is so common, and so infuriating, among artists.

Compared to the multitudes of often incredibly vague, half-formed answers one gets when inquiring as to college majors and future plans, Jamie is astoundingly unequivocal in his plans to pursue art in college. He hopes to head out West to "major in it so that eventually I can open up an art gallery, probably somewhere in California," to showcase his own art as well as the art of anyone who would be interested in having it on display.

At the helm of his art education, working to further his skill with the much-appreciated guidance of SHA teacher Mr. Lannon, Jamie is particularly aware of his progress as an artist. He understands that he still has much to learn, and always will, and is wonderfully optimistic that his art will only get better. With this attitude in mind, Jamie cannot pinpoint a favorite work of his besides that which he is currently caught up in. As he says, "I think for my favorite drawing I'd have to say it's really just whatever I'm working on at the moment. It's always more exciting than the one before it." Let us hope that it always will be.

SENIOR HONORS ART

ARTICLES BY MIMI WILSON

KIRIL PASHEV

Teeth - large molars, canines - and hair, all over, matted and mussed - textural in contrast with the fleshy smooth contoured limbs like bones - anatomy shown through, hearts and other vital organs pumping. Senior Kiril Pashev sculpts the base, the coarse, the carnal, with startling dexterity.

Kiril likes to sculpt creatures, and will rarely depict a human form. The few humans he has sculpted are very stylized, and possess what he describes as "strong bestial qualities and grotesque proportions." His work is corporeal, and far from conservative.

Having been introduced to art in middle school by Mr. Lannon, Kiril initially drew and painted, but very quickly grew excited about sculpture. Kiril says that not he mostly works in clay and is "planning and very excited to work with clay in the future." Clay is the medium through which he feels he can articulate his thoughts most clearly. Kiril executes his work in a very vivid, graphic manner. The content of his sculptures fits this style. As he says, "the feel of most of my sculpture leans toward anger, pain, and contempt."

Kiril is adamant that his work comes from him and him alone. He credits no external influence on his artwork. He attempts to channel no previous art or artist in his work. As he says, "I take nothing from famous works of art. I like to observe artwork, but nothing has ever really influenced me." While unmoved by art which has come before him, Kiril still manages to find inspiration through his own thoughts. He relates that his "imagination is twisted enough and uncontrollable enough to feed my artistic need for new ideas."

Kiril made a chess set out of Raku clay last year, and is working on a second one this year. Kiril likes making chess sets because is attracted to the idea of "putting order to chaos" in this way. He explains that "with a chess set I take thirty-two beasts," wild, and lawless creatures, and "put them in teams, and give them titles."

He is unconcerned with the final product of his efforts, stating that it is the building that counts. He is all about the process, the technique, and the joy of creating. He says that "sculpture is my outlet." He finds that when he is able to pull a form, a being - which he has envisioned within the confines of his mind - out of the clay, he experiences a profound sense of accomplishment.

While Kiril says that in college he will most likely not major or minor in art, he is absolutely positive that he will be continuing with sculpture, hoping to "just bum my way into an art studio" in some way or another.

In whatever future path he takes, let us hope that Kiril will work to retain and perfect that wonderful visceral aesthetic so pervasive throughout his art.

FEATURED ARTISTS FROM

SAMANTHA BRADLEY

Senior and Senior Honors Art student Samantha Bradley finds her inspiration in the abstract and the geometric. As she says, "I tend to draw a lot of shapes. I'm really into triangles." Samantha finds a resurfacing fascination with the cubism she was introduced to with Ms. Maserian her sophomore year. Ever since then she has "been obsessed with drawing cubes," and with distorting appendages through the fragmenting of them into smooth panes like glass and stone.

Samantha's favorite work of hers is a "black triangular mess of a sculpture" which she made in her junior year in a sculpture class taught by Mr. Lannon. As to her thought process behind this work, Samantha explains that she "wanted it to be really different from the other kids. I hot glued a bunch of triangles together in a clump, dripped candle wax and hot glue all over it to make it seem like it was melting, and then I spray painted it black." While Samantha is unable to pinpoint a favorite medium, she mostly works in sculpture, photography, and painting.

When asked as to if there are specific artists or pieces of work that she attempts to channel in her own work, Samantha states that she particularly admires the work of all of her fellow Senior Honors Art students. She revels in how "we all have different strengths in art." She really "strives to be as good at drawing as Laura or as good a sculptor as Kiril, or clothing designer like Steph." The varying mediums and talents of the SHA students thrill Samantha, bolstering her in her own art. She basks in this environment, in "having them around me giving me ideas about what I could do to make my work unique and one of a kind like theirs."

Samantha cites her mother, also an artist, as the main source of her initial interest in art. As Samantha explains, "I always wanted to draw like her. She would get me painting sets and drawing kits for Christmas and my birthdays and we'd always paint and draw together." Art is important to Samantha as an outlet, as a means of communication besides speech or the written word, and has been fostered by her many art teachers throughout the years. Samantha notes how "they all have a different feel to their art, and perspective, that has made me realize how important it is to have some creativity in my life." Her art teachers have bred in her a "personal drive to create and to make art important," and she especially lauds Ms. Maserian as a huge motivation for her as an artist.

While she is not planning on majoring or minoring in any art, Samantha plans to take art classes while in college, and is keen on improving her skill in photography and painting then. She is "really focused on becoming a teacher," but is flexible and open-minded, admitting that she could easily "switch on a dime and change my major to become an art teacher."

SENIOR HONORS ART

IAIN DREW

ARTICLES BY MIMI WILSON

Senior Iain Drew sits in the midst of a motley assemblage of not-so-malevolent monsters. He is dwarfed by this gang of grinning and gregarious creatures. Ungainly, long-limbed, one-eyed, and feigning (benignly), they surround him. They are a sampling of the re-occurring "really crazy characters," which he created throughout his junior year, made into impossibly giants - drawn to large scale and propped up to form a family of friendly freaks.

Now in Senior Honors Art, Iain has been focusing more on "proportion and realism, on drawing from what I see," but he still manages to maintain that same note of mischief in his work. His drawing for this year's yearbook cover, for example, features a realistic study of a reflection into a mirrored sphere, and yet features a boar's head (turned Sachem head for the version on the cover) atop an otherwise normal male student body.

Iain is not limited to drawing however, and is not to be constrained by two-dimensions. His current medium of choice is to be found in his most recent project, a figurative work which he constructed out of wood and knotted cloth. For his "cloth man," Iain recounts how he "made a wooden frame and wrapped cloth around it to make a life-size replica of myself."

Iain loves to "create, and to have a finished piece of work." He revels in this experience and process of creation, unique to art as it is, as he relates, "giving me to something new which is unlike anything else."

This love of art has been instilled in him from a young age. Iain credits his grandmother, as well as SHA teacher Mr. Lannon, as people who have supported him in making art an integral part of his life, as artists who have reinforced his desire to create and bolstered him in his many artistic endeavors throughout the years.

While Iain sees art's role in his life as being more of a "hobby than an interest that I would want to build a career off of," he is certain that he will continue to make art after high school, asserting that, "what I do know is that I want to keep doing art regardless of whether or not I study it in college." Iain will assuredly create for years to come.

Rumors

Neil Simon

Curtain and Cue presents: Rumors, A Farce. Directed by our very own Becca Greaves and James Gill, the production was a wonderful spin of Neil Simon's original Broadway hit.

Step foot into the WHS auditorium, and you are immediately transported to the house of Charley and Myra Brock, on the night of their tenth wedding anniversary. The play begins with the arrival of Chris and Ken Gorman, who quickly realize that Charley has overdosed on valium and shot himself in the ear. Meanwhile, the servants and his wife Myra are no where to be found. The two decide that the situation must be hidden from the rest of the guests: none of them want to be caught in a suicide scandal. The flamboyant Claire, and her husband Lenny Ganz arrive next. Shooting immediately off into the latest gossip, Claire momentarily saves Chris from having to explain the situation. The last two couples arrive with comic relief and political drama. The guests begin to hear snatches of information, and soon realize that something is not right. The action intensifies when rumors spread like wildfire, and finally the truth must be told. The characters begin to panic, talking over each other in a quickly escalating argument. The lights go black, and the stage silent. Everyone is left wondering what's to be done...

(Right) Lenny, acting as Charley, improvises a story for the officers

Tyler Hopp

Though he could be considered one of the more passive characters, he is certainly one of the most panicked when he learns of Charley's situation.

Jenna Bittner

Officer Welch has little patience for the group of party-goers, especially after they turn up their music in the hopes of drowning out the cops' calls.

Bailey Cole

One of the first to arrive, Lenny Ganz is tired of his wife's gossip, and argues against everything she says. After the men pull straws, he must pretend to be Charley when the cops arrive.

Meet the Cast

Karole Alexander

The loud and gossiping Claire Ganz reels off bits of gossip like facts, and simply can't resist a good juicy story. She adds a momentary distraction from the situation, but is the first to suspect that something is amiss.

Grace Buchard

The practical Officer Pudney, who coordinates with Officer Welch to investigate a car crash around the Brock residence. Little does she know the intensity of the situation she's about to enter...

Jenna Ditullio

The melodramatic, and at times ditzy Cookie Cusack provides the comic relief at the party. Back problems later leave her character ludicrously writhing on the floor but still determined to make light of the situation.

Marc Frongillo

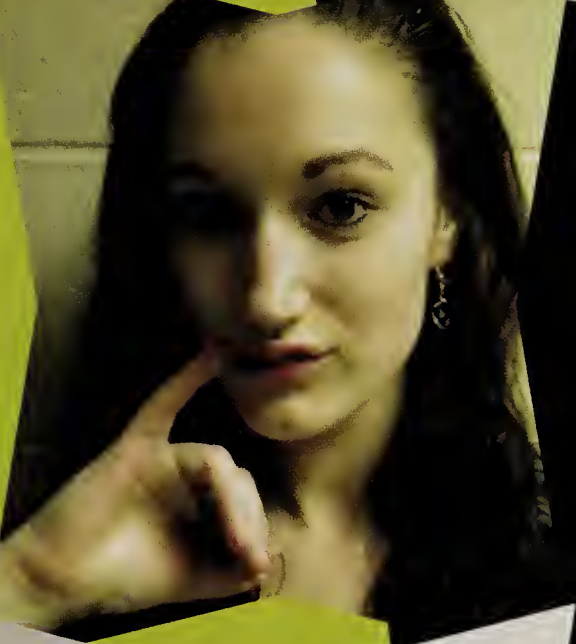

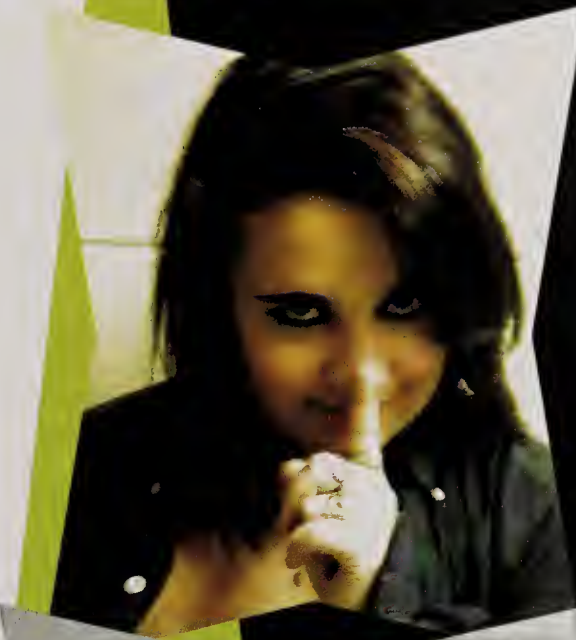

Glenn Cooper is the clever, almost sleazy politician who spends the entire night arguing with his wife Cassie. In Act II he ironically slips up to the officers about the gunshot, while trying to protect his career.

Act II answers the question in the most creative manner: it's decided that Lenny must pretend to be Charley should the police come to investigate. And indeed the worst happens, when Officers Welch and Pudney (Jenna Bittner and Grace Buchard) arrive to investigate a car crash. The situation is almost diffused when Glen Cooper (Marc Frongillo) slips up about the gunshot. Lenny is called downstairs and quickly improvises a grand story, which ends with Myra locked in the basement, and himself passing out. As Officer Welch puts it, "I buy it. Not because I believe it, but because I liked it." As the officers leave and the characters breathe a sigh of relief, the drama starts all over again when Myra is heard shouting from the basement.

Allsun O'Malley

Cassie Cooper at first comes off as a trophy wife who is sick of politics. A little full of herself, and certainly an exhibitionist, she positions herself on Lenny's lap to regain Glenn's attention.

Anime Club

Presidents: Laura Breitenbach & Alex Zaiken
Advisor: Mr. Skinder

Anime club meets on Fridays after school and is co-led by Alex Zaiken and Laura Breitenbach. We watch Japanese cartoons, attend anime conventions and partake in the nuances of Japanese pop-culture. We go to anime club to have fun and take part in the ever-growing Anime movement!

Art Club

Art Club is a relaxed place for students who want to make art in a free environment. It is where students can express their creativity outside the classroom. Whether you take an art class at WHS or are an eager beginner, Art Club is a wonderfully open environment for you to develop your ideas.

Best Buddies

President: Tiffany Chan

Best Buddies is a club that is dedicated to helping intellectually disabled students at Winchester High School. By meeting once a month to plan events between Learning Center students and club members to help unite people, regardless of their differences.

Chess, Go, Shogi Club

Presidents Eddie Fratto & Jeremy Ryerson
Advisor: Mr. Chase

The Chess, Go, Shogi Club is a student organization dedicated to teaching and practicing the mentioned board games. We hold regular tournaments but also offer a friendly atmosphere in which to practice strategies and technique.

Connect and Commit

President: Priyanha Nadanasabesan

Advisor: Ms. Ritchie

Now in its seventh year, Connect & Commit engages nearly half of all WHS students in service each year. This year, the club has increased its focus on educating its members and the community about pressing issues such as HIV/AIDS, Poverty and Support of the Troops. Connect and Commit continues to be a place where all students are welcome and are empowered to make their community the best it can be.

Creative Writing Club

President: Kate Puzzanghera

Advisor: Mr. Miles

The Creative Writing Club is a place for students to come together and spend time on their writing, be it serious or silly. They write on given prompts that are meant to spark ideas but also allow students to have plenty of freedom to let their imagination run utterly wild, from time-traveling machines in closets to velociraptors taking over the world. The Creative Writing Club also produces the Literary Magazine, where any student can submit their own work for inclusion.

Electric Car Club

President: Wes Holland

The electric auto club is dedicated to helping solve the problems of tomorrow. Humans can't use fossil fuels forever. At the EV club, students learn the ins and outs of working on a car, prototyping and design, electrical engineering, as well as fabrication.

Environmental Club

Club Leaders: Carly Cronon, Clara Lauterwasser, Karl Lindberg, & Rachel Unger

Advisor: Mr. Marchand

The WHS Environmental Club's goal is to make the high school a more environmentally-friendly place and spread environmental awareness both within the high school and in the surrounding community. We attend environmental fairs, host walk/bike to school days, and coordinate volunteering at the Museum of Science. Go green!

Film Club

President: Nick Neighbours

Advisor: Mr. Waddell

At WHS film club we watch a diverse array of entertaining, thought provoking movies. We watch everything from new cult films (Scott Pilgrim vs. The World) to renowned classics (casablanca). A few club favorites include "The Usual Suspects" and "Children of Men". One does NOT have to be a film "buff" to attend. Film club is a warm, welcoming environment perfect for anyone with an interest in movies, food, and some quality socializing.

Four Square

President: Sam Stratton

Advisor: Mr. Cacciapuoti

It's jungle rules.

French Club

President: Don Muir

Advisor: Mrs. Anderson

The WHS French Club is an all-inclusive group run by President Don Muir, Vice Presidents Ngawang Gyatso and Julia Page, and advisor Madame Anderson. Whether touring a boulangerie or making crepes and conversing in French, the French club is an enjoyable. experience. Whether you are French in nationality, take French class at WHS or are simply looking for a good time, the WiHS French Club is the place for you!

Harvard Model United Nations

President: Sam Stratton

Advisor: Ms. Bolles

This year marked the first time in many years that WHS sent a delegation to Harvard Model UN. Our delegates represented the nations of Honduras and Australia, and debated issues ranging from the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan to internet censorship. Four days of committee meetings and unmoderated caucuses gave all the delegates a new respect for parliamentary procedure, business formal, the dais, and decorum.

Harvard Model Congress

President: Alex Zaiken

Advisor: Mr. Downs

HMC allows the students of WHS and other schools to learn about government and politics. Students are also afforded the opportunity to experience how people in their community view politics, and how federal programs influence our local government. Students are presented the "modus operandi" of our government in a fun and educational way. In a world that is almost completely governed by political endeavors, HMC allows students to be politically aware, and 'governmentally' enthused.

Improv

President: Jenna Czeck

Advisor: Katie Pickett

Improv Club gives students a chance to do improv comedy. Playing improv games and performing scenes, they meet every Monday in Ms. Pickett's room. Everyone is encouraged to fight their boundaries and be creative.

Italian Club

President: Rob Grassi

Advisor: Tanya Steele

The Italian Club is for students who want to have fun learning about Italian culture. Our activities include watching Italian movies, sharing Italian food, and playing cultural games. All are welcome; you don't have to speak Italian or be Italian to join!

Juggling Club

Presidents: Colin Burbage & Oskari Rautiainen

The Winchester Juggling Club is a place where jugglers are welcome to come learn, teach, and hone their craft. There are all kinds of jugglers of varying expertise, ranging from standard ball, club and ring juggling to contact, diabolo, poi, passing and fire juggling. It is a very interesting and fun atmosphere to be in. As one member says, "It's, like, wicked cool." The presidents are Colin Burbage, Jeffrey Burka, Oskari Rautiainen, Michael Calnan, James Mulhern and Clara Lauterwasser.

JSA

President: Ingrid Li

Advisor: Ms. Kangas

The Junior Statesmen of America is a completely student run organization that "allows for an exchange of ideas through stimulating student debates, thought talks, problem solving, and a variety of simulations" both serious and silly. By participating in these activities, members gain a more intelligent and informed viewpoint. Members of JSA also have the opportunity to participate in regional conferences all throughout the Northeast as well as in Washington D.C.

Latin Club

Advisor: Mrs. DeCamp

Winchester Latin Club is a small and tightly knit group of students either enrolled in Latin or deeply intrigued by Classical Rome and Greece. The club annually goes to the Massachusetts Junior Classical League (JCL) convention in the spring, Classics Day in early December, and the Snowball in February. The club consistently dominates the Olympica tournament at the Latin Convention in May and hopes to hold an annual gladiator fight starting this year.

Math Team

President: Tony Dong

Advisor: Ms Donovan

The Winchester High School math team is best described as a breeding ground of intelligence and inflated egos. Ms. Donovan is the backbone of the team; without her, the math team would fall apart. Tony Dong is the captain, though if you asked him what that meant, he wouldn't be able to tell you. The math team has two simple goals; math and fun. The two words may seem inherently contradictory at first, but math team is all about the epic journey to blend them together.

Multicultural Issues Group

Advisors: Mr. Kurhajetz & Mr. Burke

Music Recording Club

President: Nick Neighbours

Advisor: Mr. Lannon

If you are a musician or just a music enthusiast with a desire to learn about music technology come to Music Recording Club. Fully utilizing the new Mac Lab, the club uses Garageband to record and mix digital sounds and live instruments with a focus on collaboration.

NHS

President: Jeff Chen

Advisor: Mrs. Smith

Led this year by President Jeff Chen, Vice President David Stringfellow, Secretary Alex Saich, and Treasurer Katy Mckeough, the National Honor Society inducted over 60 new members last fall, making it one of the largest groups at WHS. Members of the NHS are dedicated not only to scholarship, but also to their community. This year, the NHS offered an in-school tutoring service to underclassmen, and also hosted a Spring dance at the Jenks Center.

Pan-Asia

President: Catherine Zuo

Advisor: Mrs. Dove

Members of Pan-Asia Club learn about various Asian cultures by engaging in crafts, discussions, and food samplings. Movies and music from Asia further immerse students in a fun, casual atmosphere. Highlights of the year include a henna party with student guest artists, a lunar New Year potluck dinner, and a showing of the comedy movie Shaolin Soccer. All are welcome here!

WHS Pregnancy Pact

Red and Black

Presidents: Ariana Albanese & Stan Fonseca

Advisor: Ms Kangas

The staff of the Red and Black newspaper have been able to work as a team to put out our monthly editions. This year we revived the tradition of the "Dueling Banjos", featuring two contrasting views on a current political or social topic. With pen in hand, adversaries Tom Segerstrom and Sam Stratton faced off month after month in this battle of opinion. With a group of talented individuals and a school full of activity, the Red and Black has continued its tradition of making sure we capture "everything that is fit to print".

Robotics Team

President: James Mulhern

Vice President: Kota Weaver

Advisors: Mr. Petty and Ms. Duke

The Winchester Robotics Club designs and builds both fighting and task oriented robots for regional and national competitions. Advisors David Petty and Diane Duke assist the students in the design and building process, an effort led by President James Mulhern and Vice President Kota Weaver.

Spanish Club

President: Kate Smith-Lin

Advisor: Ms. Kean

The Spanish club meets once a month to learn about Spanish and Latin American food, film, music, and culture. With the support of Ms. Kudlate, Ms. Kean and her most dedicated members we've seen two movies (The Orphanage and Like Water for Chocolate), prepared tortilla española with the Spanish Exchange students that visited in September, eaten at Anna's Taquería, and participated in a game night. We will finish the year with Foreign Language Olympics against the other language clubs, and a dinner at The Border Café.

Spectrum

Presidents: Genevieve Adele Lacey & Clara

Lauterwasser

Advisor: Mr. Skinder

The WHS Gay Straight Alliance is a safe place for students to support each other while working to promote equality. Students talk about issues in the teenage LGBT community, such as stereotypes, proper terminology, coming out, and many other topics. We also share stories about our experiences as people of the LGBT community, which includes queer individuals as well as straight allies. Many new members have joined this year and made the club a fun and friendly place to be.

Stampede

Captains- Tanya Chakladar & Jen DoHa

Stampede is a dance group that performs around Winchester. Stampede is made up of a diverse mix of students from each grade who enjoy dancing. We make beats with our bodies, using our hands and feet to make rhythms. This group performs annually at the WHS Pep Rally and the Talent Show held in April.

StarCraft 2

Presidents: Shawn Yoon & Alex Zaiken

WHS' brand new club, StarCraft 2, does exactly what you would think: play SC2, the most popular worldwide RTS game. Although we can't replicate the SuperBowl-esque aura of Korean tournaments, our club strives to make each member a better player. SC2 is a strategy game in which a player has to creatively manage an economy and build an army. Many thanks to our club advisor Mr. Weir, for a successful rookie year. All are welcome to join; no experience in the game is necessary.

Student Council

Advisor: Mr. Robbat

The Student Council is a group of students dedicated to improving the environment at WHS. This year, members hosted many events to increase school spirit. We organized Spirit Half Week, as well as the "Powder-puff" football game. This year's officers were: President Rob Pontrelli, Vice-President Ariana Albanese, Treasurer Noelle Phelan, and Secretary Renata Mukai. The Student Council would like to thank Mr. Robbat for all the hard work he has put in, bringing life and excitement to this dedicated group of students.

Student Movie Production

Presidents: Alex Lin & Shawn Yoon

Student Movie Production meets every Wednesday to produce student-made films. The lengths of the films vary depending on the subject. Each student has his/her own part, including sound manger, lighting director, actors/actresses, cameramen, script-writer, story planner, equipment manager, and director. The club consists of members who are enthusiastic and passionate towards filmmaking. Anyone who is interested in helping out in the creation of student-made films can join. No experience required.

Tech Crew

Advisor: Mr. MacKenzie

Tech Crew is a non-profit organization where the members help out at school events including Spring Musical, Fall Play, various ceremonies and many more. Tech Crew fosters lighting system, sound system, video recording system which is associated with WINCAM, and so many more. Tech Crew includes members who are sincere and are interested in technology. Anyone who is interested in helping out Winchester High School's events can join.

Ultimate Frisbee

The Winchester Ultimate Frisbee Club is structured to provide an opportunity for students to participate in student-led recreational Ultimate activities throughout the year. This organization is advised by Daniel Downs and led by captains Oskari Rautiainen, Colin Burbage, Michael Parnas and Clara Lauterwasser.

WHS Dance Company

President: Megan Tomey

Advisor: Ms. Kangas

The WHS Dance Club was introduced this year as a new way to bring dance to the high school community. The club provides students with the opportunity to experience various styles of dance through weekly classes and performances. The club also held movie nights and traveled into Boston for a day to see Boston Ballet's "The Nutcracker." These events expose students to new and different forms of dance while participating in activities any dancer or non-dancer would love.

YESS

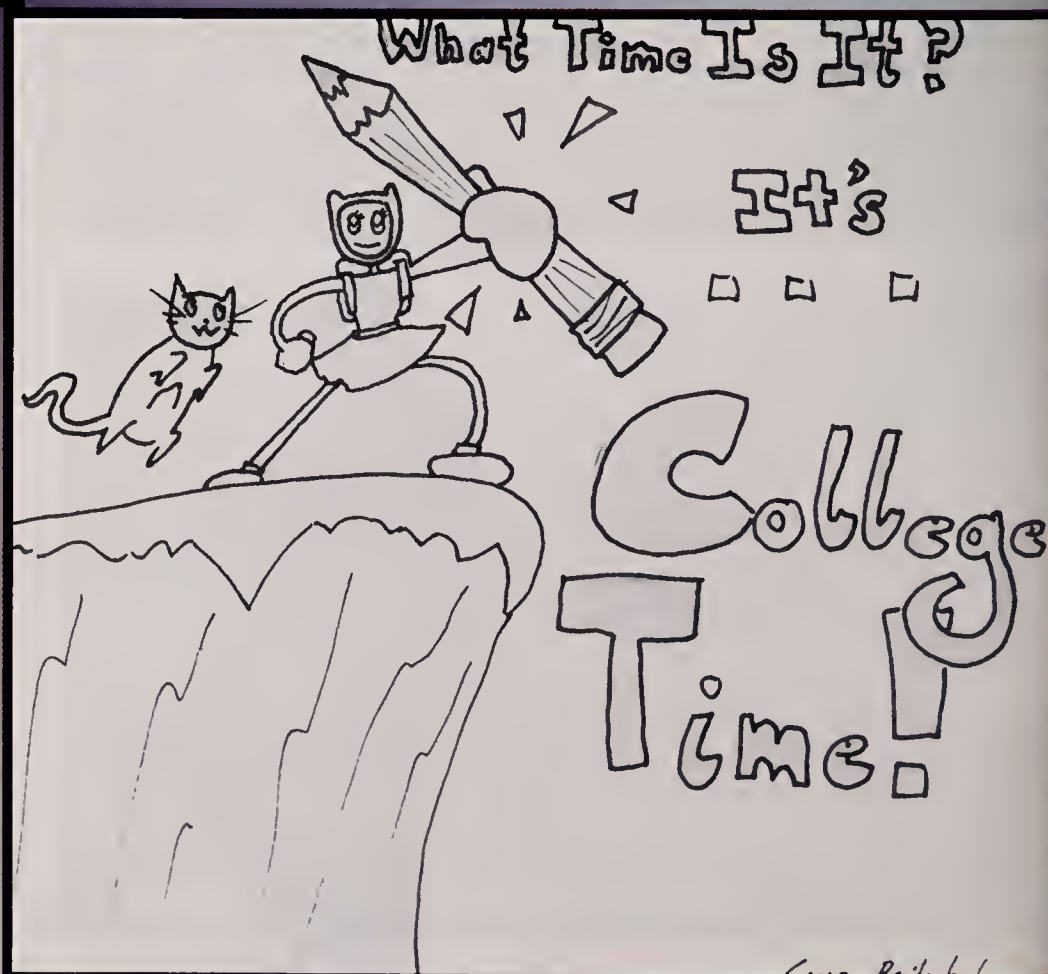

President: Dina Fahim

Advisors: Mrs. Needham & DJ Prowell

Yess stands for Youth Enacting Student Support. We are there to support one another and talk about today's problems. We are currently working on a project to help middle school kids with unhealthy problems they might face later on. YESS is a great way to help out people, or even ask fellow students for help.

Michael Stern

From the day he was born, Michael was our "baby on the go" -- always on the move, always getting into new things. As he grew, Michael exchanged the binky for a mouthguard, the baseball for a bass guitar, and now the batting helmet for a graduation cap.

We are so proud of his accomplishments thus far, and can't wait for the next chapter in "The Adventures of our Man of Action!"
We love you Michael,
Mom and Dad

Timothy DeReden

Congratulations!

Live your passions while striving to be the best you can be. May you never lose your zest for life and continue to bring joy to others with your fun-loving, caring spirit.

All our love always,
Mom, Dad and Emily

Julia Augenstern

Dear Julia: From your earliest moments, we knew you'd be a special person with your own outlook on life and your own way to make a splash. You haven't disappointed! You have grown into an independent, caring and unique individual with wonderful sensibilities in so many areas. The way you take care of your friends or campers when they're in need shows how compassionate you are. You bring intelligence, creativity and humor to everyone, too. We hope you understand that we want for you all of the most terrific things that ever can be, without the pains and disappointments that life can bring. Reach for your full potential, and challenge yourself to be the best person you can be. Give of yourself willingly and with fullness of spirit. But remember to also grab for all the love, fun, chuckles and sweetness you can find.

We love you immensely, Mom, Dad and Elise
